[Moving the bishop back - 15...Be7 looks like a positional concession. Indeed, in the following high-level game White was clearly better after 16.Bh3 Be6 17.Kf1 Qd7 18.Kg2 a5 19.Rad1 Rfd8 20.b3± Jakovenko, D - Bukavshin, I / TCh-RUS Men 2015 ]

16.Bh3 Be6 17.Kf1! A nice move. Shirov's idea is to protect the Bh3, so that would prevent Black from pushing ...f7-f5 at some point. 17...Qa5 Klekowski deviates from his unsuccessful game against Olszewski, which was played one year before. Alas, this innovation doesn't really change the evaluation of the line - Black is doomed to passive defence with no real chances for counter-play.

[Unfortunately, liquidating the strong Nd5 would drop a pawn now: 17...Bxd5 18.cxd5 Ne7 19.Qxa6 f5 20.Kg2 fxe4 21.Be6+ Kh8 22.Qc4 Qb6 23.Rhf1± ]

[The previous encounter of Maciej Klekowski saw 17...Qd7 18.Kg2 Ne7 19.Nxe7+ Qxe7 20.Rad1 Rfd8 21.b3± Black's position is extremely passive here. ]

18.Kg2 Qc5 19.b3 A consistent move. The Pc4 is well-protected now, and all possible q-side counter-play is prevented. As in Maciej's previous game, now Black's position lacks any constructive ideas. 19...Bxd5

[Possibly, the lesser evil would be: 19...a5 20.Rad1 *(*Deserves serious attention as well 20.Nc7!? forcing Black to swap the bishops in an unfavourable situation. ) 20...Bxd5 21.Qxd5 Rfd8 22.Qxc5 dxc5 23.Rd5 g6⩲ trying to hold an unpleasant endgame. ]

20.exd5! In most cases, such a change of pawn structure favours Black. However, the lack of harmony doesn't support Black's counter-play here.

[ The somewhat more usual recapture is less effective here: 20.cxd5 Ne7 21.a3 a5 22.axb4 axb4 23.Ra6 f5! 24.exf5 g6 and Black gets some counter-play. ]

20...Ne7?!

[ It was better to liquidate into an endgame, even though White manages to win a pawn: 20...Nd4 21.Nxd4 Qxd4 22.Qxd4 exd4 23.Rad1 Rbe8 24.Kf3 g6 25.Rxd4 Bg7 26.Rdd1 f5⩲ Obviously, converting White's material advantage into a full point is a tough task here. ]

21.a3 a5

[ After 21...bxa3 22.Rxa3 there is no way to avoid the loss of Pa6. For instance, Qb6 23.Rha1 Ra8 24.b4 f5 25.Qb3 Kh8 26.Qa2+- ]

22.axb4 axb4 23.Ra4 f5 24.Rha1 Black's k-side looks quite attractive, but it is very difficult to make any progress. At the same time, White's rooks are ready to penetrate. 24...Kh8? It's hard to believe, but this is already a decisive mistake.

[ It was absolutely necessary to protect the Pf5: 24...g6 25.Qd1 ( 25.Ra7 Nc8 26.R7a6 Rb6± ) 25...Bg7 26.Ra6± Kh8 ( The pseudo-aggressive 26...e4? only helps White: 27.R1a5 Qc7 28.Nd4+- ) 27.Qe1 Rb7± ]

25.Ra7 Ng6

[ Unfortunately, it was impossible to keep the knight on e7: 25...Rbe8 26.R1a5 Qb6 ( 26...Qc8 27.Nxb4 e4 28.Qe2 f4 29.Qxe4+- ) and now 27.c5! leads to fatal consequences: dxc5 28.R5a6 Qb8 29.d6 e4 30.Qc4 Nc8 31.d7 Nxa7 32.dxe8Q Rxe8 33.Qxc5+- ]

26.Bxf5 As a result, Black has lost an important pawn. 26...e4 A desperate attempt to complicate matters. 27.Qxe4 Rbe8 28.Qg4 Ne5 29.Qh5+- Now Black cannot create any threats, so White gets time for consolidating. 29...Qb6 30.R1a6 Qd8 31.Nd4 Qf6 32.Ne6 There were a lot of decent alternatives, but Shirov prefers to simplify matters. 32...Qxf5 33.Qxf5 Rxf5 34.f4 Ng6 35.Rxd6 Black's extra piece has no value here - White is just dominating all over the board. 35...Bxf4 Alas, there was nothing else to do with such a poor bishop. 36.gxf4 Nxf4+ 37.Kg3 Nxe6 38.Rxe6 Ref8 39.Re3 g5 40.h5 g4 41.d6 Rxh5 42.Rae7 Rh3+ 43.Kxg4 Rh6 44.Re8

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c4 Article in ChessBase Magazine #121 by Moldavian grandmaster Dorian Rogozenko considerably warm up interest to this variation - or interest to this variation provoked writing of the article? In general, I don't know exactly. I know only, that the article is very good. 11...b4 12.Nc2 0-0 Diagram

[ In my opinion, the best way to get rid of the knight d5 - as Pavel Eljanov (specialist of Pelikan-Sveshnikov variant) did: 12...a5 13.g3 Bg5 14.h4 Bh6 15.Bh3 Bb7 , Berg-Eljanov, Kemer 2007. ]

(Diagram)

Black pretend that pawn b4 is not under attack. 13.g3

[ Pawn is poisoned: 13.Ncxb4 Nxb4 14.Nxb4 Qb6 15.Qd2 Rb8 , Torres-Nunez, Benidorm 2003 - 16.Nd3?! Qd4!∓ ]

13...Be6 14.Bg2N

[ Rogozenko mainly discussed a plan 14.h4 a5 15.Bh3 - but Amonatov's choice, certainly, is also playable. ]

14...Rb8 15.0-0 Usually, Ra8-b8 met with b2-b3.But here it while unnecessarily, cause bishop already stands on e6. 15...a5

[ 15...b3? 16.axb3 Rxb3 17.Rxa6+- ]

16.b3 Now is the time. 16...Bxd5

[ Unfortunately, knight's change doesn't turn out: 16...Bg5 17.f4! Bh6 18.Qh5± - therefore, bishop had to change to a knight , but that is a different story. ]

17.Qxd5 Only so - the pawn d6 must remain a weakness.

[ 17.cxd5 Nd4! ]

17...Qb6

[ 17...Nd4 may seem unpleasant, but only from the standpoint that without knights game will be quite boring: 18.Nxd4 exd4 19.f4 Rc8 20.Qh5 - queen gets off scot-free, but what to do next? ]

18.Rad1

[ 18.Qxd6?? Rfd8-+ ]
18...Rfd8 19.Qd3 a4! Advancing a5-a4 - the only reasonable plan for Black.
20.Qe2! Diagram

Farrukh instantly captures disadvantages associated with the Timofeev's last move.
20...Ra8?! I don't think that was possible to admit white rook in own camp.
[ 20...Nd4! 21.Nxd4 exd4 22.Rd3 Ra8 23.f4 ( 23.e5 dxe5 24.Bxa8 Rxa8⩲ ) 23...Ra5 - mutual game! Black will pressure by "a"-file, White will advance in a king flank. ]
21.Rd5 Ra5 22.Rb5! Qa7
[ After 22...Rxb5 it would be a position-type, which very suits to Amonatov's style - no counterplay for opponent: 23.cxb5 axb3 ( 23...Nd4 24.Nxd4 Qxd4 25.bxa4+- ) 24.bxc6 ( 24.axb3?! Nd4 ) 24...bxc2 25.Qxc2± ; Amonatov will play such position to the end... to the winning end! ]

23.Qd3!
[ Pawn could be taken: 23.Nxb4!? , but after Nd4 ( 23...Rxb5 24.Nxc6+- ) 24.Qg4 Nxb5 25.Nd5! boundless complications arose. Who does them need, when White get a clear advantage? ]
23...axb3 24.axb3± Ra2 It is necessary to give away the material, but Timofeev wants to get the chances through 2nd line instead. 25.Nxb4 Nxb4 26.Rxb4 Bg5 27.Qd5 Forces passing Black to a passive defence. 27...Rf8
[ 27...Rd2 28.Rb7! Rxd5 29.Rxa7+- ]
28.Rb7 Qa3 29.Bh3! Do you see a threat? 29...h5 Timofeev does.
[ 29...Rd2 30.Qxf7+! ]
30.Qd1 Using 29...h5, Farrukh undertakes a regrouping. 30...g6 31.Qf3 The queen takes on f3 an ideal position. 31...Rb2 32.Rd1 Qc5 33.Rd5 It's need to uproot queen from an active place.
[ 33.Bd7? Rxf2 ]
33...Qa3 34.Kg2 King stands now under the rook b2. Is this a provocation?
34...Bd2! Diagram

(Diagram)

Timofeev probably saw, what White will reply to this move - however, this is a best chance! 35.Rxd2! Rxd2 36.Qf6 Qb2? Eh...
[ 36...Qa8! would be more unpleasant for White: 37.Be6! Qxb7 38.Qxg6+ Kh8 39.Qxh5+ Kg8 40.Qg6+ Kh8 41.Qh6+ Kg8 42.Bf5 Rxf2+ 43.Kxf2 Rb8 - white king quite naked too, this fact could give some counterchances. ]
37.Be6! Rxf2+ 38.Qxf2 Qxf2+ 39.Kxf2 fxe6+ 40.Ke2+- Pawn "b" plus black king cut off the 7th line... The endgame is lost clearly. 40...Ra8
[ 40...Rc8 41.Kd3 ]
41.b4 Kf8
[ 41...Ra2+ 42.Kd3 Rxh2 43.c5+- ]
42.b5 Ke8 43.Rg7 Ra2+ 44.Kd3 Kd8
[ 44...Rxh2 45.b6 Rb2 46.b7 Kd8 47.c5! dxc5 48.Kc4+- ]
45.b6 Kc8 46.Rc7+ Kd8 47.Kc3 King will burst into enemy's camp. 47...Ra1 48.Kb4 Summary: 1) Pelikan and Sveshnikov variant is being in some crisis - not easily to get counterplay for Black (11.c4) 2) there is no need to undertake a fire on the board, if you can make a move, which promises a stable advantage (23.Qd3) 3) sometimes it makes sense not to choose the strongest, but the most unpleasant for the opponent moves (36...Qa8)

To my understanding, this represents some sort of stagnation of the researching process. The Anti-Marshall systems are not bad, of course, and offer practical chances for both sides, but, if objectively speaking White has nothing better than keep his pawn on d3, one natural question is whether he shouldn't just deviate at an earlier stage of the game, with, say, 2.f4. Hopefully, the slight decline in White's result in this tournament will give a new impulse to the investigation of the main line starting with 8.c3 8...b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 Bg7

[ 10...f5 leading to an obvious draw after 11.Nxb5 axb5 12.Bxb5 Bd7 But this looks like aiming for a draw too openly. In fact, it will be precisely in the absence of queens when Black will be able to advance his strong mass of pawns without fearing to weaken his king's position. From this point of view, strengthening the control of the d-file with 13.exf5 looks better, when Bg7?! would be at least dangerous for Black after 14.a4 Nd4 15.Bxd7+ This is much more ambitious than Qxd7 . Because of the possibility of ...Bc1, White cannot offer the exchange of queens on d5 without prior capturing the bishop. This move marks the start of White's gradual decline. Anand probably felt that he was about to lose stability in the centre and tried to remedy this problems with the help of the pawns, but he seem to have chosen the wrong pawn! His last move not only fails to block the black mass of pawns, but also weakens the king'sposition. According to Mikhail Golubev in Chess Today, Kamsky recommended 16.c3 during the press conference, with the obvious intention of weakening Black's light squares with h5. Anand suggested Qb7 17.Ne3 Bh6 18.cxd4 Bxe3 . Together with GM Constantin Ionescu, we worked out such a continuation: 19.fxe3 Qxg2 20.Rf1!? Qxh2 ]

(Diagram)

13...f5! A very instructive moment. Anand might have hoped that Black would be forced to give up the centre because of the pressure against the e5-pawn. Instead of that, Kamsky simply brings another piece into play, underlining the fact that he is 3 whole tempi ahead in the development, which makes the opening of the position undesirable for White, even if this would yield him an extra-pawn. 14.Nc2 Bb7 15.Ne3 fxe4 The knight has reached this square after jumping around none less than 5 times, slightly more than this usually happens in this type of structure. The retreat was necessary in view of the positional threat Bxf4, when Black would lose stability in the centre. 16.Nf5 White has managed to reduce his delay in development to bearable proportions. Black has to react energetically before his opponent manages to consolidate his spatial advantage. 16...Qf6! In the following phase of the game, the fight will be focused around the d5-square. The outcome of this fight will be to a certain extent determining for the further course of the game.

[ 16...Qg5 . Indeed, continuing the neutral policy with 17.Nxd6+ leads to disaster after Kf8

A) 18.Nxb7 followed by the march of the black king to b3. Of course, not Qxg2? because of ( 18...exd3 19.0-0 ) 19.Rf1 when White is suddenly winning. As mentioned in the comments to the game Kamsky-Bacrot from the previous round, rook endings are rarely suitable to definitive evaluations. Therefore I shall refrain from naming this move the decisive mistake; I would just mention that now White has huge problems defending his position. This was the last moment when Anand could have improved his queen side situation with exd3 for instance;

B) 18.Bxe4 Bxe4 19.Nxe4 Qxg2;
C) 18.Qb3 ]

17.Bxe4 d5 18.Bxd5 Quite logical. White eliminates one of the main defenders of the d5-square. However, I would allow myself to make a general remark here. Along the game, we shall see several similar situations: whenever two enemy pieces will be in contact with eachother, it will be mostly White who will release the tension, sometimes helping Black to slightly improve his position. Event though in certain cases such exchanges are compensated by other positional factors (as is the case with Bxf6), my personal feeling is that the psychologic tendency favoured Black.

20...Qxg7 Marin,Mihail: 'RR: '=' '=" 21.Nxg7+ Ke7 22.Nf5+ Ke6 Black has managed to unblock this pawn with relative ease. However, this is not by far not the end of the story: after the exchange of the central pawns, the gravity centre will move to e4. Here we can appreciate the merits of the exchange on f6, because the black knight controlled the e4-square, too. 23.Ne3 Rd7 24.Ke2

30.Rxa2?! dxc3! 31.bxc3 From the situations mentioned in the comment on White's 18th move, this is the first major concession. Black's king side structure becomes more threatening now. On the other hand, it is hard to recommend anything else for White. 31...Rd6 32.Rga1 Kf5

[ 32...Kd7 33.g3 ]

33.g4+ fxg3+ During the last two moves, Black has improved the position of his both remaining pieces. 34.hxg3 After the recent exchanges, the static elements of the position have become more significant, inclining the balance to Black's favour already. [ 52...a4 53.f6 Rc1 54.Rxc1 and the a-pawn is unstoppable. After Wijk aan Zee, this is Anand's second defeat by hands of Kamsky in a relatively short period of time. The reader might remember that in the mid-nineties these two outstanding players had to cross swords in two of Candidate's Matches from the parallel cycles of the FIDE and PCA World Championships. Each of them won one of the matches to become challenger of the respective version, meaning that they both remained with a mixture of pleasant and annoying memories. Botwinnik once wrote that he considered the repeated confrontations along the years with certain players as making part of a "life-long" match, with the same psychologic implications as a normal match. Judging from the recent results, we can state that, at least for the moment, Kamsky managed to deal with this delicate psychological issue better than his opponent. Which cannot mean that there will be no further returns of the balance... The sadistic Rxc1 is also possible, but not really necessary. ]

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 I decided to play the Accelerated move order to cut out some White options, 9.0-0-0 being an important one of course. However of course now Black has to be ready for the Maroczy Bind. 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Bxf6 gxf6 Transposing back to a normal Dragon position. 9.Na3 b5 10.Nd5 f5 11.exf5 Bxf5 12.c3 A new move for the site but hardly critical. Alexandr declines a highly theoretical debate. 12...Bg7 13.Nc2 White gives up on any idea of mating Black and instead settles in for a long positional tussle. 13...0-0 Controlling the d5 square but most importantly vacating the d7 square for the knight. 14.Nce3 This appears to be the first new move of the game. 14...Be6! I think this is the most accurate. My plan is to be able to recapture on b4 with the rook when I'll have dual threats of ...a5-a4 and ...Nf6xe4. 15.g4 Bearing in mind the following variation, it may be that this logical move is in fact inaccurate. 15...b4 I continue my plan 16.Bg2 bxc3 17.bxc3 With this move Alex actually offered me a draw. However I was in a combative move and tried for more. 17...Rc8 Trading into a typical knight vs light squared bishop position which is often seen in Maroczy Binds. 18.0-0 Ne7 19.Rc1

[ 19.c4 ]

19...Nxd5 20.Bxd5 Rerouting the bishop round to c6 is what I expected. It looks quite threatening there, and annoying as it controls the e8 square but now the bishop has problems extricating itself as it's blocked in by its own d5 pawn. 20...Bh6 21.Rc2

Qh4!? Preventing White from advancing with f4-f5 and also getting an outpost on e4 for the knight. This was the position I envisaged when declining the draw. The game is still around balanced Black can hope to exchange into a good knight vs bishop endgame (as I in fact achieved) but in the meantime have to be careful about a White initiative. 22.Bg2 Kh8 23.h3 Preparing to open up the kingside. 23...Rg8 24.Qxd6 Bf4 25.Re1 h5 26.Kf1 hxg4 27.hxg4 Rgd8 28.Qb6 Rd3 And now I returned the draw offer, feeling that I was forced to go a little passive and frankly being a bit of a chicken! 15...Rb8 16.exf5 e4 17.Rae1 Bb7 After a second generally-forced sequence of moves we arrive a further tabiya in which Shirov remains true to his earlier choice against Carlsen. 18.Qg4! Kh8!?

[ Finally Cox's recommendation has begun to receive some attention, but we shouldn't forget that matters were hardly totally clear after 18...Rfe8 19.cxb5 d5 20.bxa6 Bc6 ( 20...Ba8!? 21.Bb5 Rf8 22.Re3 Kh8 23.Rb3 Be5 24.Nc2 Rg8

Here I have proposed Rbd8!? , *(*but 25...e3 also deserves serious attention so long as Black then meets 26.g3 with Qd6! , as proposed by Van Delft and Ris for ChessVibes it's far from easy for White to consolidate here and I have to agree with the Dutchmen that 27.Bxf7 Rg7 28.Bc4 exf2+ 29.Kxf2 d3 30.Ne3 Bd4 31.Bxd3 Ba7 gives Black excellent play for the five (!) pawns. )]

19.Bxe4 Bxb2

[In my notes to Shirov-Carlsen I drew attention to 19...Rfe8! , which still looks quite critical to my eye: 20.Bd3!? ( 20.Re3 Bxe4 21.Rfe1 Qf6 22.Rxe4 Rxe4 23.Qxe4 Qxb2 gives Black fairly promising activity ) 20...Qxe1 21.f6 Bxf6 was agreed drawn in Solovjov-Zhigalko, St Petersburg 2008 presumably Khalifman's assistant didn't like the look of *(*the 2600+ correspondence game, Gerhardt-Leotard, 2004, suggests that 21...Bh6!? 22.Qh5 Qd2 23.Qf5 Be4 24.Bxe4 Rxe4 25.Qxe4 Qxb2 26.Qd3 b4 gives Black enough counterplay ) 22.Qf5 Kg7 23.Qxh7+ Kf8 24.Rxe1 Rxe1+ 25.Bf1 when White's minor pieces are far from well coordinated, but might Carlsen and Markos have been less happy to play against such an active queen? ]

20.Re3! A strong if logical novelty and one which improves over all of:

[a) 20.f6 Qxf6 21.Nc2 Rg8 22.Qh5 Bxe4 23.Rxe4 bxc4 24.Rxc4 Rb5 was fine for Black in Hellers-Vaisser, Brocco 1990. We should not assume that this critical variation is a modern development! ]

[b) 20.Bd5 Qc7 21.f6 (again this sacrifice to deflect Black's bishop and obtain the f5-square, but again Black isn't too troubled by it) Bxf6 ( 21...Rg8!? 22.Qf3 Bxd5 23.cxd5 Qc5 24.Nb1 Rg6 may also be playable ) 22.Qf5 Be5 23.Rxe5 ( 23.Re4!? Qc8! 24.Qh5 Bxd5 25.Rh4 Be4 26.Rxe4 Qe6 should be OK for Black, since 27.f4? fails to Bd4+! 28.Rxd4 Qe3+ ) 23...dxe5 24.Qf6+ Kg8 was agreed drawn in T.Luther-M.Muzychuk, Neustadt an der Weinstrasse 2009. ]

[c) 20.Nc2 Rg8 21.Bd5 led to another early draw in Ganguly-Markos, Kolkata 2009, played just a fortnight before our main game. ]

20...Bxe4?!

[Naturally Black steers clear of 20...Bxa3? 21.Bxb7 Qxb7 22.Rxa3 when 23 Qd4+ is a large threat, ]

[but 20...Rg8! looks like a clear improvement to me because 21.Qf3 Bxe4 *(*but not 21...Bxa3? 22.Bd5 Qd7 23.Rxa3 bxc4 24.Qc3+ Rg7 25.Qxc4 , leaving White a pawn ahead ) 22.Rxe4 Qb7 23.Rfe1 Rbc8! gives Black decent counterplay: for example, 24.Qb3 ( 24.cxb5!? Rc3 25.Qe2 Bxa3 26.bxa6 Qc6 isn't too speculative a sacrifice, as Black's kingside remains a target, but still I would be surprised if Black was worse here ) 24...Bf6 25.g3 d5 26.cxd5 Rc3

27.Qb4 Qxd5 and Black regains his pawn with an edge. One must wonder if Markos forgot his previous analysis here, or has actually found something wrong with 20...Rg8. ]

21.Rxe4 Qf6

[ This only lands up interfering with the scope of Black's bishop, and Markos soon finds himself in trouble. Indeed, I believe that 21...Qb7!? would have been a better try. White can then regroup his knight, but the critical line must be 22.Rfe1!? d5 23.cxd5 Qxd5 24.Nc2 a5 25.Ne3 Qxa2 26.Qh5 Bf6 27.Ng4 Bc3 28.Qh4 , sacrificing the queenside for serious threats on the kingside. Can Black defend here I wonder? ]

22.Nc2 bxc4 23.Rxc4 d5 Black had to obtain some counterplay, and at least this way he can make it hard for White's knight to journey to d5. 24.Rb4 Bc3 25.Rxb8 Rxb8 26.Ne3 d4?

[ Now Black's bishop gets blocked out and Shirov's active pieces quickly take control. I suspect that Black had to prefer 26...Rd8 , although after 27.Qf3 ( 27.Qh5!? d4 28.Ng4 Qg7 29.Nh6 Rf8 30.Rd1 f6 doesn't seem so clear ) 27...d4 28.Ng4 Qd6 29.Qd3 White would have retained the upper hand f3 and Nf2 will follow. ]

27.Nd5 Qe5 28.f6! Black's king position is a permanent cause for concern in this line, and here Shirov targets it to force Black's pieces on to the defensive. 28...Rg8 29.Qd7 Qe8 30.Qe7 Ba5

[ This doesn't really help, but Black's cause would have been hopeless after 30...Qxe7? 31.fxe7 Re8 32.Rb1 Kg7 33.Kf1 ]

[ and even 30...Qc8!? 31.Qe5! Qg4 32.g3 would have left him in a rather bad way. ]

31.Rd1 Qa4 32.Qe2 As ever Shirov's piece coordination is most impressive. Now 33 Ne7 is a huge threat against which Black doesn't really have a good defence.

32...Rg5 33.Rb1! Rxd5?

[ No doubt a time trouble error which blunders into mate, but after 33...Bd8 34.Rb8 Qa5 35.Ne7 Qc7 36.Rc8 Qd7 37.g3! Black would have had to give up in view of the line d3 38.Qd2 Rg8? 39.Nxg8 Qxc8 40.Qh6 . ]

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 Rarely played at elite level these days, but this approach ('the old main line'?!) remains fairly popular with a number of lower-rated players. 10...f5

[The Novosibirsk Variation remains a playable alternative, even if Black did recently suffer an accident with it: 10...Bg7 11.Bd3 Ne7 12.Nxe7 Qxe7 13.0-0 0-0 14.c4 f5 15.Qf3 d5!? (Radjabov's active approach White now responds critically) 16.cxd5 fxe4 17.Bxe4 Rb8 18.Rfd1 Rb6? *(*the active 18...f5! 19.d6 Qf6 looks somewhat more critical ) 19.Rac1 Rd6?! 20.Bxh7+! Kxh7 21.Rxc8 Rxc8 22.Qf5+ Rg6 23.Qxc8 e4 24.Nc2 Bxb2 25.Ne3 and a demoralised Black gave up in Z.Almasi-Bokros, Mainz (rapid) 2008. ]

11.Bd3 There have also been developments elsewhere:

[a) 11.c3 Bg7 12.exf5 Bxf5 13.Nc2 is quite a positional approach, but one which Black has learnt how to handle:

A) the alternative is 13...Be6 , which allows 14.g3 , not that this is too bad for Black: 0-0 15.Bg2 a5 *(*Black can accelerate his counterplay with 15...f5 16.0-0 a5 17.Qh5 b4 , but he quite possibly should move his queen's rook after all following 18.Nce3 instead bxc3?! 19.bxc3 Kh8 20.Rab1 Ra7 21.Rfd1 Ne7 saw White pressing in A.Kovacevic-Cherniaev, Biel 2008, and now 22.Nxe7!? Rxe7 23.Bd5! would have sufficed for a pull ) 16.0-0 Rb8 17.Qh5 f5 18.Nce3 Kh8 19.Rad1 Ne7 20.f4 e4! 21.a3?! Nxd5 22.Nxd5 Qc8 and Black's queenside play left him slightly for choice in Swiercz-S.Zhigalko, Gaziantep 2008;

B) 13...0-0 14.Nce3 Be6 *(*the main move, but 14...Bg6!? is also possible - see Mista-Moiseenko in the Archive ) 15.Bd3 f5 (we've reached but one of several important Sveshnikov tabiyas) 16.0-0 Ra7 ( 16...Kh8!? is the alternative, and an approach favoured by Kolev and Nedev ) 17.a4 *(*for 17.f4 Ne7 see McDonald-Kwiatkowski in the Archive ) 17...Ne7 18.Nxe7+ Rxe7 19.axb5 axb5 20.Bxb5 d5 21.Ra6 Kh8 *(*plenty of midnight oil has been burnt too over 21...f4 - see Tony's notes to Anand-Leko I'll just add that Black should be fine after 22.Rxe6!? Rxe6 23.Qxd5 Qxd5 24.Nxd5 Kh8 25.f3 e4! ) 22.Qa4 f4 23.Nc2 and now I believe that Bc8!? ( 23...Rg8 24.Ra1 Bf8 25.Ne1 was preferred in D.Eggleston-D.Woods, British Championship, Liverpool

2008, and now the committal 25...e4 looks critical, whereas Bf5?! 26.Qa5 Qc8?! 27.Bc6 left Black struggling in the game before he went down in a ball of fire: Bh3? 28.Bxd5 Bxg2 29.Nxg2 Qg4 30.Qb6 Reg7 31.Qf6 Qh5 32.Ra7 1-0 ) 24.Ra8 Re6 is Black's best approach. This line still seems quite unresolved, but Black's kingside chances should most certainly not be underestimated. ]

[ b) 11.Bxb5 axb5 12.Nxb5 has been shorn by Ra4! of much of its danger, but might still catch out someone new to the Sveshnikov. Indeed, 13.b4?! Rxb4 14.Nbc7+ Kd7 15.0-0 Rg8 16.Nxb4 Nxb4 17.c3!? ( practice has shown 17.Nd5 Nxd5 18.Qxd5 Ke7 to also be good for Black ) 17...Nc2!? ( Kolev and Nedev's sensible suggestion of 17...Qxc7 18.cxb4 Qb7 also looks rather good for Black - quite why even a few people are still playing 13 b4 is beyond me! ) 18.Nd5 Nxa1 19.Qa4+ Ke6 20.f4 f6 21.Rxa1 fxe4 22.Rb1 Kxd5?? ( horribly greedy after 22...Kf7 23.Qxe4 Rg7 Black would still have had to untangle, but he would have enjoyed excellent chances to do so and put his extra piece to good use ) 23.f5! Qc7 24.Rb5+ Kc6 25.Rb8+ and 1-0 was a tragedy for Black in Vitoux-D.Collas, Pau 2008 Kd5 26.Qb3+ Qc4 27.Rb5+ decides. ]

[ c) 11.exf5 Bxf5 12.Bd3 Be6 13.Be4 is quite a simplistic side-line. A recent game continued Bg7 14.Qh5 Rc8 15.c3 Ne7 ( natural and promising, although 'The Easiest Sicilian' offers analysis suggesting that 15...b4!? is also dangerous ) 16.Rd1 Rc5 17.Nb4?! Qb6 18.Qg5 Kf8! and Black had the initiative in Sengupta-So, Gaziantep 2008. ]

11...Be6 12.c3

[ A major alternative is, of course, 12.0-0 , as we'll examine in Shabalov-Moiseenko. ]

12...Bg7 13.Nxb5!? Probably the most dangerous and critical of all White's potential sacrifices on b5. The main point being that Black can no longer defend his c6-knight with ...Bb7. 13...axb5 14.Bxb5 Bd7

[ The invariable choice, although Sutovsky's counter-sacrifice 14...Rc8!? 15.Qa4 0-0!? remains an option - see Tony's notes to Almasi-Sutovsky. ]

15.exf5 0-0 It's time to take stock. White has three pawns for the piece and a handy bind on the position. I don't believe that Black is worse here, but White certainly should have sufficient and quite long-lasting compensation. 16.Qg4

[ A surprising choice. Somewhat more critical is 16.0-0! when Black's best is probably e4! ( 16...Rb8 17.a4 Re8 18.Qg4 Kh8 19.Qe4! leaves White in control, as Tony showed in his notes to Almasi-Wang Yue, although not everyone is yet certain that this is too terrible for Black ) 17.a4 Re8 . Nevertheless, he is still not out of the woods here, as the recent game Sebag-Ushenina, Krasnoturinsk 2008, demonstrated: 18.Qg4 Kh8 19.Rad1 Rb8 ( Kolev and Nedev devote a good page of analysis to 19...Re5!? 20.Ne3 Qf6! , which they feel is Black's best defence - I've only had time for a quick half hour look so far, but this approach seems reasonable the main point being 21.Qe2 Rg8! 22.Nc4 Qxf5 23.Nxe5 Bxe5 with decent activity and counterplay ) 20.Rfe1 Qc8 21.Ne3!? Ne5 22.Qxe4

Bxb5 23.axb5 Rxb5 24.Nd5 (Black has broken up White's queenside pawns, but problems remain due to her sub -optimal coordination) Rxb2! 25.f6 Bf8?! ( 25...Bh6! improves, eyeing the d2-square and meeting 26.f4 with the perpetual-forcing Rg8 27.fxe5 Rbxg2+ 28.Qxg2 Rxg2+ 29.Kxg2 Qg4+ ) 26.f4 Rb5 27.c4 Rc5 28.fxe5 Rxc4 29.Qe3 dxe5 and Ushenina still had some work to do before she eventually drew. ]

16...Kh8!

[I suspect that this approach, bringing the king's rook into play and beginning counterplay, is the most challenging one, although 16...Nb8 17.0-0 h5 was also OK for Black in Vallejo Pons-Topalov, Linares 2004. ]

17.Qe4?! Rg8?!

[Continuing the plan, but Kolev points out that White's last was inaccurate (17 0-0 should be preferred, with an unbalanced but roughly level game in prospect), since here 17...Ra5! is promising: 18.a4 *(*or 18.Bc4 Qg5 ) 18...Ne7 (Kolev & Nedev), and after 19.Bxd7 Nxd5 20.Bb5 Nc7 Black is all set to expand with ...d5. ]

18.f6 Bh6 19.Bd3 Rg6 20.h4?

[The beginning of an extremely ambitious concept, and one which is punished in fine style by Moiseenko. Presumably White wanted to prevent ...Bg5, but he had to get his king to safety and after 20.0-0 Bg5 21.b4 White would still have had his trumps, and the position would not have been at all clear. ]

20...Qg8 21.Nb6?

[This optimistic move is badly misguided. I would rather take Black after 21.g3! Rg4 ( 21...Be6!? , hoping for 22.Qg2 e4! 23.Bxe4 Bxd5 24.Bxd5 Re8+ 25.Kd1 Ne5 is a tempting alternative ) 22.Qg2 Qb8 , but at least White would still have been in the game this way. ]

21...Rg4 22.Qe2

[White's king position would have been a major concern after 22.Qd5 Ra5 23.Qxd6 Be8 , but perhaps either this or the desperate ]

[ 22.Qxh7+ Qxh7 23.Bxh7 Ra7 24.Bd3 Be6 should have been tried, not that there can be any doubting Black's large advantage in both cases. ]

22...e4! 23.Bb5?

[Accelerating the end. White's position, would, though, have been rather Unappetising after 23.Bc4 Ne5 or ( 23...e3!? 24.Nxd7 exf2+ 25.Kf1 Rxg2 26.Qf3 Rg3 27.Qxf2 Qg4 28.Be2 Qe4 . )]

23...e3! A highly thematic blow and one which heralds a decisive attack. 24.Nxa8

[This loses mundanely, but I've also failed to find a defence after 24.Nxd7 exf2+ 25.Qxf2 *(*or 25.Kd1 Re8 ) 25...Rf4 . ]

24...exf2+ 25.Kf1 Rxg2 26.Qf3 Ne5

[The main point of Moiseenko's neat combination is revealed after 26...Ne5 27.Qxg2 Bxb5+ 28.Kxf2 Be3+ , which is a fitting finish - just compare Black's active pieces with White's unmoved rooks! ]

Black immediately takes care of his dark-squared bishop. 7.Bg5 That agressive move is the only way to fight for the opening advantage. 7...a6 Black chooses a safe continuation. Now he could complete the development without weaking his pawn structure. 8.Na3 White has got a pair of the bishops. On the other hand,the position is closed enough,so he should play very energetically in order to make the bishops powerful. 8...b5 That position was tested many times on the highest level. 9.Nd5 A latest attempt to fight for the opening advantage which connected with an idea of f2-f4. 9...Be7 A very logical move-black takes control of "d5" and leaves an opportunty of queen-side castle. 10.Bxf6N White allows black to exchange the bishops,as it will make the Pd6 very vulnerable. 10...Bxf6 11.c3 0-0! A typical defensive idea in such a positions. Black exploits a drawback of 7.h4 and gets a nice square for his knight. 12.Nc2 Bg5 13.a4 White chooses a very energetical continuation. He tries to use some vulnerablity of Ke8. 13...bxa4 Black's knight is placed well on g4,so he shouldn't remove it. 14.Rxa4 a5! It necessary to swap the knights as soon as possible. 15.Bc4 Rb8 16.Ra2 Kh8! That ugly move is an effective defensible resourse which allows to simplify the position. 17.Nce3 g6 18.0-0!? White finds an interesting opportunity of keeping the pressure.

18...f5! 19.Qa4 White has no clear attacking prospects,so at least he takes the pawn back. 19...Bd7 20.Bb5 Rxb5 So,black has successfully completed the development. The only drawback of his position is a somewhat ugly statement of Ng8.

9th round and I needed to play for a win to keep my chances of winning the tournament. My opponent here is a experient grandmaster that I´ve played at least more than 20 times. Playing for a win against Matsuura it´s always a big challenge for any player, that´s why I prepared a lot in this day for this game. Let´s go to the fight! 1.e4 c5 Surprise on the first move! I only expected 1...d5, and variations of Semi-Slav defence. I Believe my opponent feels that I had prepared a lot, and that´s why he decided to surprise me on move 1. [While there has been some recent interest in 11.Bd3 Be6 12.c3 Bg7 13.Nxb5!? , Vallejo's choice is surprising because the bishop sacrifice on b5 has been under a cloud for some time. ]
11...axb5 12.Nxb5 Ra4 13.Nbc7+
[Just a reminder that 13.b4?! has been considered inferior even since Leko introduced Rxb4 14.Nbc7+ Kd7 15.0-0 Rg8! against Luther (Essen 2002). ]
13...Kd7 14.0-0 Rxe4
[Critical, but in his fine 'Starting Out: Sicilian Sveshnikov', John Cox draws attention to 14...Rg8!? , which could certainly do with some attention. The main point is the Leko-like 15.Qh5 Qg5 and after 16.Qxf7+ Be7 17.g3 Qg6 18.Qxf5+ Qxf5 19.exf5 a most unclear situation is reached. White does have four pawns for the piece, but his knights are currently tied down and Black will at least regain one pawn on f5. ]
15.Qh5 Nd4
[Presumably Vallejo had an idea in store too for 15...Ne7 , since 16.Qxf7 Kc6 17.c4 ( 17.b4?! Nxd5 18.b5+ Kb7 19.Nxd5+ Qd7 20.Qxd7+ Bxd7 21.Nf6 Bxb5 22.Rfb1 Kc6 23.Nxe4 fxe4 left Black better with his unopposed bishops in Xiong-Sarkar, Philadelphia 2008 ) 17...Rg8 18.Rac1 Rg7 leaves White with nothing better than to repeat moves with 19.Qf6 Rg6 20.Qf7 Rg7 . ]
16.c3 Theory's main line, but we should also examine the alternatives:
[a) 16.Qxf7+?! Kc6 17.Nb4+ *(*Cox points out that 17.b4 Qh4? doesn't force mate on account of 18.b5+ Kc5 19.Nc3! ) 17...Kb7 isn't totally clear, but my gut feeling is that Black should be able to consolidate here. Certainly 18.Nb5+ Qd7 19.Qd5+ Kb6! (some typically nifty footwork from the black king in this variation) 20.Nxd4 Rxd4 21.Qb3 Bb7 22.c4 Ka7 left him in control and with the extra piece looking rather useful in Herejk-Tikkanen, Ceska Trebova 2007. ]
[b) 16.f4!? Kc6 17.c4 cements the knights in place and could do with further attention in my view. One rare test continued Kb7 18.Qh3 Kb8 19.a4! Be6 *(*the a-pawn also arrives in time after 19...Rxf4!? 20.a5 Qh4 21.Qxh4! Ne2+ 22.Kh1 Rxh4 23.a6 ) 20.a5 and White's counterplay was not to be underestimated in Hebels-Gonzalez Freixas, correspondence 2007. ]
16...Ne2+ 17.Kh1 Kc6 Necessary. Black wants to both defend f5 and hide his king on b7. 18.g3 In turn the best move. White prevents 18...Nf4. 18...Rg8?
[It's not clear whether San Segundo's memory failed him at this point or whether he deviated in a desperate bid to avoid preparation, but the text does appear to be inaccurate. Correct is 18...Kb7! , which turned out well for Black in Mastrovasilis-Illescas Cordoba, Calvia Olympiad 2004:

A) Vallejo must have had an improvement in store, and might that have been 19.a4!? ? here, though, Rc4 20.Qxe2 *(*writing for Chess Vibes, Van Delft and Ris suggest 20.Nb5!? Be6 21.Rfd1 Nd4 22.Ne3 and this may well be the way to go continuing this line with Nxb5 23.Nxc4 Nxc3 24.bxc3 Bxc4 25.Qxf5 Ka7 26.a5 we find that Black's bishops look strong, but that White is quite active and might well have enough counterplay to maintain a rough balance ) 20...Rxc7 21.Rfd1 Ka8 22.a5 Bb7 23.a6 Bxd5+ 24.Rxd5 Qd7 didn't give White enough for his piece in Gonzalez-Mori, correspondence 2005;

19.Qf3! A strong retreat. The queen is heading for d3. 19...Nf4?

[ Now Black is pretty much just lost. Much better is his previous attempt of 19...Qxc7! 20.Nxc7 Kxc7 , which might save him: 21.Qd3 ( 21.Qh5!? is worth a try ) 21...f4! *(*but not 21...Bb7? 22.f3 Bh6 23.Rae1 Nxg3+ 24.hxg3 Rxe1 25.Rxe1 Rxg3 26.Rf1 and Black didn't have enough for the queen in German-Fernandez, Mar del Plata 1992 ) 22.Qd5 ( 22.Rfe1 fxg3! 23.Qxe4 g2+ 24.Qxg2 Rxg2 25.Kxg2 Bb7+ 26.Kf1 Nf4 also leaves Black rather active ) 22...Bb7! *(*a better try than 22...Rg7? 23.Qa5+ Kd7 24.Qa7+! , which enabled White to take control in T.Lane-Tegzes, Richmond 2004 ) 23.Qxf7+ Kb6 24.g4!? *(*an ambitious machine suggestion there's no killer discovered after 24.Qxg8 , but fxg3 forces White to tread rather carefully: 25.Qb3+ Rb4+ 26.f3 Rxb3 27.axb3 e4 is all fairly forced and then 28.Kg2 exf3+ 29.Rxf3 gxh2 30.Kxh2 Bxf3 31.Rf1 Be4 32.Rxf8 leads to an ending in which White still has some defending to do ) 24...Rg6! *(*better than *24...Re3+?! 25.Qxb7+! 20.gxf4 Bb7

[ Neither would 20...Be6 have saved Black on account of 21.Rad1 Kb7 22.c4 . ]

21.Qd3 Qxc7!? Desperation, but it's too late for this tricky concept. 22.Nxc7 Kxc7 23.f3 The problem: White blocks the key diagonal and Black won't be able to shift the pawn from f3. 23...Rxf4 24.Rf2 e4 25.Qc4+ Kb6 26.a4! Rxf3 27.a5+ Ka7 28.a6 1-0

1.e4 Berg,E Berg,E Berg,E Berg,E: 'Berg,Emanuel Berg,Emanuel: 'Berg,E" 1...c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 A slight surprise. As far as I know this was the first time Hector had tried out the Schliemann Variation. However, I had it in mind since it's a typical "Hector variation" - he likes to enter dynamic positions with lots of possibilities. This variation used to have a bad reputation, but in recent years it has been played by strong world class players with good results. 4.Nxd4 This calm move is not the most challenging, but can put a lot of pressure on Black's position in the long term. The move ...f5 has seriously weakened the light squares which will be of great importance later on. 4...Nf6 This exchange helps White, but is also necessary because after 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 An interesting move that stops Black from castling for the moment. The question is if it's really worth the loss of a tempo. Another insteresting aspect is that the same position can arise with reversed colours in the King's Gambit with the important difference that there White usually does not exchange pawns in the centre with fxe5. 7...a6 Black continues with the development of the queenside and also overprotects the pawn on e5, which creates the option of playing ...Na5 later on. 8.Na3 b5N A novelty. To me it seems a bit too slow. Black should either have continued development or played ...Na5 in order to be able to castle. 9.Nd5 Now we enter a known position again by transposition of moves. 9...Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6?!N This novelty seems to give White a little bit too much time and he soon ends up in difficulties. This moves takes control of the important d4-square and stops Bloffer much hope of long castling for Black. 13...bxa4 14.Ncb4 Bd7 15.Bxa6 The White bishop no longer has any function on c4 since Black's castled position is already destroyed. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 f5 11.Bd3 Be6 12.0-0 Bxd5 13.exd5 Ne7 14.Qh5 In this tabiya, White has, of course, a number of important alternatives:
[a) 14.c3 Bg7 15.Qh5 has some similarities with our main game, but does enable the bishop to retreat with e4 16.Bc2 . That well-known Sicilian basher, Thomas Luther, recently appeared on the white side here, and this variation, despite a fair amount of excavation over the years, is by no means a dead-end: 0-0 17.Rae1 Qc8 18.Kh1 ( 18.f3 is a sharp alternative see Nataf-Spasov in the Archive ) 18...Ng6 *(*like Kolev and Nedev, not to mention Cox, I prefer 18...Rb8! , which should secure decent counterchances: 19.g4 b4 20.cxb4 was tried in So-Salem, Dubai 2008, but now Black strangely eschewed the standard method: Nxd5 21.gxf5 Kh8! ) 19.Bb1 Re8 20.Nc2!? (an uncompromising idea) Nf4 21.Qg5 Nd3 ( 21...Nxd5!? 22.Nd4 Re5 23.f3 is a critical alternative ) 22.Ne3 h6 23.Qxf5 Nxe1 24.Rxe1 and with e4 weak, White had reasonable play for the exchange in Luther-Zherebukh, Cappelle la Grande 2008. ]
[b) 14.Re1 is a plan which was popular a few years back, but nowadays Black seems to have found the right method: Bg7 15.c3 ( 15.Rb1 is the alternative - see Rogozenko's notes to Czarnota-Felgaer, Lugo 2007, in the Archive ) 15...0-0 16.Qh5 e4 17.Bf1 Qc8 *(*this has done fairly well for Black, although he can also achieve a reasonable enough game with 17...Re8 18.Rad1 Rc8 ) 18.Rad1 Re8 *(*I've long felt that 18...Ng6?! is inaccurate on account of 19.g3! Re8 20.Bh3 however, Black got away with it in Bosch-Kuipers, Dieren 2008, but possibly only because White didn't meet Qc5 21.Bxf5 Bxc3 22.bxc3 Qxa3 with 23.Bxe4!? Qxc3 24.Re3 Black will try to blockade the e5-square, but his kingside is rather weak and can always be probed further if necessary by h4-h5 ) 19.Nc2 Ng6 20.g3!? *(*previous practice has shown 20.Nd4 Bxd4 21.Rxd4 Re5 to be OK for Black ) 20...f4 21.Nd4 Bxd4 22.Rxd4 (Brandenburg-Bedouin, Groningen 2008) Re5!? 23.Qh6 Qf5 24.Bh3 Qh5 25.Qxh5 Rxh5 26.Bg2 f5 and by keeping his pawn mass together Black should be fine, despite his slightly offside rook. ]

[ c) 14.c4 Bg7 15.Rb1 is often met by 15...e4, but I feel that bxc4!? 16.Nxc4 0-0 is a decent if committal alternative. Play might well proceed 17.Re1 f4 18.b4 f5 19.Bf1 e4 20.f3 e3 21.a4 Rb8 22.Qd3 Ng6 , which was rather unclear in Shomoev-Tregubov, Moscow 2008 White's queenside trumps are very real, but Black's kingside chances should not be underestimated either. ]

[ d) 14.Nxb5 snatches a pawn and if this was good the Sveshnikov would never have become popular, but it's not! Rensch-Kolev, Las Vegas 2008, continued Bg7 15.Nc3 e4 16.Bc4 Ng6 17.Qh5 Bxc3 18.bxc3 Qf6 19.Qh6 Rg8 with decent good play White might not be worse here, but it's clear that his is the harder of the two positions to handle. ]

14...e4 15.Be2 Bg7 16.c3 0-0 17.Nc2 f4 18.f3 Not the only move, but breaking up Black's pawns like this is White's main try. 18...f5 19.fxe4 fxe4 20.Bg4 Kh8!?

[ A novelty. That said, there's no real need to fear the check on e6 and previously 20...Qc7 21.Rad1 Kh8 22.Nd4 Qc5 23.Kh1 Qxd5 24.Nf5 Qe5 had been OK for Black at this stage in Shabalov-Krasenkow, Port Erin 2006. One wonders what improvement if any Shabalov had up his sleeve here. Meanwhile those interested in further details are referred to John Cox's fine introductory guide to the Sveshnikov ('Starting Out: The Sveshnikov'), which covers Shabalov-Krasenkow as one of its illustrative games. ]

21.Rae1 Be5 22.Be6!?

[ A critical response to Black's novelty. It's true that 22.Rxe4 Nxd5 splits up Black's pawns, but this should be fine for him: his minor pieces are well centralised and it's not exactly hard to cover h7 if needed. ]

22...e3 23.g3! Breaking up Black's pawns after all, and I feel that this promises White an edge. 23...Qb6

[ Quite possibly 23...Ng6!? 24.Bf5 Rg8 is a better try, since the logical 25.Kh1 promises White only an edge after fxg3 26.hxg3 Bxg3 27.Rxe3 Qh4+ 28.Qxh4 Nxh4 29.Be6 . ]

24.Kh1

[ Not the only promising approach. Indeed, perhaps a better case can be made for 24.Rf3!? when Black has to be careful, as the plausible line Rf6 25.gxf4 Bxf4 26.Rh3! Rh6? 27.Qf7! demonstrates. ]

24...fxg3 25.hxg3 e2!

[ Good defence. Moiseenko keeps the position complex and White on his toes, whereas I've failed to find an acceptable position for Black after both 25...Rf2?! 26.Rxf2 exf2 27.Rf1 Rf8 28.Kg2 , keeping the black queen out of play, ]

[ and 25...Bxg3?! 26.Rf7 Rxf7 27.Qxf7 Bh4 28.Nxe3 , although in both cases the presence of opposite-coloured bishops does give Black some chances to hold, as is so often the case in the Sveshnikov. ]

26.Rf3 Rxf3 27.Qxf3 Ng6 28.Ne3

[ The alternative was 28.Kg2 Rf8 29.Qxe2 Qd8 30.Rh1 ( and not 30.Qh5?? Qf6 ) 30...Qg5 31.Bg4 , but here Black is able to gain sufficient counterplay with

Nf4+! , as those opposite-coloured bishops save him after 32.gxf4 Rxf4 33.Ne3 Re4 34.Rh5 *(*unfortunately for White he can't unpin after 34.Rh3 Bf4 35.Qd3 Qg6 , as the knight must stay on e3 to defend the bishop ) 34...Qxe3 35.Qxe3 Rxe3 36.Kf2 Rd3 37.Rxh7+ Kxh7 38.Bf5+ Kh6 39.Bxd3 Bf4 . ]

28...Rf8 29.Nf5 b4! Moiseenko continues to harass White on the dark squares, and thereby avoids going a pawn down. 30.c4?!

[ This has been a pretty decent and high-quality scrap so far, but around here Shabalov perhaps tries to hard. I feel that White would still have been a little better after 30.cxb4! Qxb4 31.Rxe2 Bxb2 32.Qe4! , since Qxe4+?! 33.Rxe4 Be5 34.Rb4 would have enabled him to generate threats with his active and well co-ordinated pieces. ]

30...Qa5 31.Qb3

[ Now Black gets to cause some trouble down the f-file. A sharper alternative was 31.b3!? Qxa2 32.Qd3 Bc3 33.Rxe2 Qxb3 34.Nxd6 when anything might have happened in the forthcoming time scramble. ]

31...Ne7 32.g4 Qd8!?

[ I suspect Shabalov may well have been low on time by this point. At any rate, Moiseenko decides to go for the win, rejecting in the process 32...Nxf5 33.Bxf5 Rf6 34.Rxe2 Rh6+ 35.Kg2 *(*and not 35.Kg1?? Qb6+ ) 35...Rh2+ 36.Kf1 Rh1+ 37.Kg2 Rh2+ which would have led to perpetual. ]

33.Qh3??

[ Shabalov loves to attack, but now the e-pawn lives and White fails to get anywhere on the kingside. The pawn had to be taken and after 33.Rxe2 Nxf5 *(*prudent 33...Ng6?! 34.Qe3 Nf4 35.Rh2 can only favour White ) 34.gxf5! (possibly a position which put a low-on-time Shabalov off 33 Rxe2, but Black can't get his rook into play in time and so White is OK) Qh4+ 35.Kg2 Qh2+ 36.Kf3 Qf4+ 37.Kg2 Black has nothing better than to give perpetual. ]

33...Ng6 34.Qh6

[ Perhaps it was best to give up the exchange immediately with 34.Rxe2 Nf4 , not that there can be any doubting Black's large advantage after 35.Qe3 Nxe2 36.Qxe2 Qg5 . ]

34...Nf4 35.Kg1 Qf6

[ The machine points out that there was a faster way: 35...Qb6+! 36.Kh1 Rb8 and there's no good defence to the threat of 37... Qf2, since 37.Qh2 fails to Nxe6 . ]

36.Qxf6+ Rxf6 37.Kf2 Bxb2 Now it's Black who is a pawn up and that e-pawn's a killer. 38.Kf3 Bc3 39.Kxf4 Bxe1 40.Ke3 Bg3 41.Kxe2 Be5 42.Kd3 a5 The potential passed pawn spells the end. [Not for Reinderman the more common move order 12...0-0 and if 13.g3 a5 . ]

[Not everyone likes to go ...a5 so quickly, however, and 12...Rb8 13.b3 Bg5 14.g3 0-0 15.Bg2 a5 16.0-0 Ne7 was preferred in Nakamura-Van Wely, Wijk aan Zee 2012. This position should be compared carefully with the notes to Black's 13th move, below, and here I'm not too sure what the rook's doing on b8. Nakamura forced the bishop back with 17.h4! and after Bh6 18.Nxe7+ Qxe7 19.Qd5 Qc7 20.Rad1 Rd8 21.Kh2 was slightly for choice, although after the game both players suggested that Black should be OK around about here. ]

13.g3 One thing that the leading exponents of the white cause do appear to have agreed on is that only by fianchettoing, or at least creating the possibility of a fianchetto, can White aspire to a small plus. 13...0-0

[If Black is determined to activate his dark-squared bishop, now is the moment and 13...Bg5 14.Bg2 0-0 15.0-0 Ne7 reaches an important tabiya and one which can come about from a couple of move orders. It's notable that Shirov has now given this variation a second try as White and in Shirov-A.Muzychuk, Gibraltar 2012, 16.h4!? *(*instead 16.b3?! Nxd5! 17.Qxd5 Be6 18.Qd3 Qb6 19.Kh1 a4! gave Black the initiative in Movsesian-Tregubov, Russian Team Championship 2008,; and in the Archive one will also find coverage of 16.Nde3 Bxe3 17.Nxe3 Be6 18.Qd3 from the later Movsesian-Tregubov, European Championship, Plovdiv 2008 Shirov's choice is new for us on the site and evidently he considers h4 a useful move to include even when White has already gone short ) 16...Bh6 17.Nde3 *(*at first a surprising retreat, but what else to play as White? the problem with 17.Qd3 is that there's no good recapture after Nxd5 with 18.Qxd5 Be6 19.Qd3 Qb6 giving Black pretty easy play,; while 17.Nce3 might be met by an exchange on e3 and ...Nc6, or by Nxd5 18.Nxd5 Be6 which looks solid enough for Black, such as after 19.a3 bxa3! 20.Rxa3 Rc8 21.Qd3 Rc5 ) 17...Bxe3 *(*I'd be surprised if activating the slightly strangely placed knight on c2 like this was best indeed, one can make a good case for 17...g6!? as Ng4 is nothing to worry about and after 18.Qd3 Qb6 19.Rfd1 Rd8 Black should be OK - yes, her position is a little more solid than ideal, but such is the nature of this variation ) 18.Nxe3 Be6 19.Qd3 Qb6? *(*after this White is definitely somewhat better in a previous game Black had dug in with 19...Qd7! 20.Rfd1 Rfd8 in Badmatsyrenov-Maletin, Ulan Ude 2009, keeping White out of f5, although after 21.a3 Nc6 22.axb4 Nxb4 23.Qc3 White might still be able to claim a little something ) 20.Nf5! (exploiting the weakness of d6 to bring the light-squared bishop into the game)

[Timman decides to go with the h-pawn without delay, keeping open the option of Bh3 while preventing any ...Bg5 ideas. The alternative is 14.Bg2 Be6 and only then 15.h4 when it's worth reminding ourselves of how Black should try to defend: Be7 *(*as we saw last month in Shirov-Mista, European Rapid Championship, Warsaw 2011, I'm not totally convinced that Krasenkow's slightly simplistic 15...Bxd5!? 16.cxd5 Nb8 17.Ne3 Na6 should be enough for equality,; but 15...g6!? is possible, as played by Shirov himself! - see the notes to Morozevich-Shirov, Tal Memorial, Moscow 2008, in the Archive -; and there's also my radical idea of 15...Nd4!? ) 16.0-0 Rb8 17.Qd3 Qd7 18.Nxe7+ ( 18.Rad1!? improves, but Black still looks fine to me after a4 ) 18...Qxe7 19.b3 Rfd8 20.Rad1 a4! 21.Rd2 Ra8 22.Rfd1 Qa7 23.Kh2 Qc5 and Black had brought his queen to a fine square while preparing to open the a-file in Socko-Vuckovic, Khanty-Mansiysk Olympiad 2010. ]

14...Be7

[Now after 14...Be6 White doesn't have to transpose to the last note with

A) but might prefer 15.Bh3 . That said, I suspect Timman would have put his bishop on g2, as here a4!? 16.Ncxb4 Nxb4 17.Bxe6 fxe6 18.Nxb4 Qb6 19.Qd2 Be7! gave Black excellent play for his pawn in Nisipeanu-Shirov, Foros 2008, as we've seen before.;

B) Postscript: Just before sending this column off to Tony I noticed that 15.Bg2 was Shirov's choice in a later round at Gibraltar where his opponent rejected all of the above options in favour of Rc8 and after 16.0-0 Bxd5 17.cxd5 Nd4 18.Nxd4 exd4 19.Qd2 Qd7 20.Rac1 h6? ( 20...Rxc1!? 21.Rxc1 Rc8 22.Rc6 d3 and if 23.Qc1 Re8 looks like a much better defensive try ) 21.Rc6! White demonstrated that the presence of opposite-coloured bishops was rather helping him, not Black, in Shirov-Baron, Gibraltar 2012.;

C) 15.Bg2 , ]

[I know that nobody reads books these days, but still it's surprising that 14...a4!? hasn't received more attention. It was proposed by Kolev and Nedev in 'The Easiest Sicilian' and did receive a rare outing in Morozevich-Halkias, Khanty-Mansiysk 2011: 15.Qd2 *(*the main point is that 15.Ncxb4 Nxb4 16.Nxb4 Qb6 gives Black good play and pressure for his pawn,; while 15.b3 gives Black a few options: I quite like just moving the bishop to e6, but axb3 16.axb3 Rxa1 17.Qxa1 Qa5 is likely OK too and in Eggleston-White, Sunningdale 2011, after 18.Qb2 Bd8 19.Bd3 Black would have been no more than a touch worse had he opted for the solid Ne7 20.Nxe7+ Bxe7 21.0-0 Qc5 22.Ne3 Be6 ) 15...Rb8 16.Nce3 Nd4 17.0-0-0! (White's king will be safe enough on the queenside since he can always keep the position closed over there) Be6 18.Kb1 b3 19.a3 Qd7 20.f4 Bxd5 21.Nxd5 and White was better in view of his plan to pawn storm with f5, g4, etc. ]

15.Qd3 Continuing to keep the light-squared bishop's options open. 15...Be6 16.Bh3
[ It still wasn't too late to try and return to the realm of Shirov-Mista with 16.Bg2 , although Black doesn't have to play ball and a4!? 17.0-0 Rb8 might give him enough counterplay. ]
16...Bxd5
[ Naturally Black had no intention of exchanging bishops on h3 and then suffering for a very long time, but even here I'm a little nervous about the exchange on d5. Perhaps without reason, but still 16...Rb8!? is worth a thought too. White has a little tactic here in 17.Bxe6 fxe6 18.Rd1!? , although after Rc8 ( even 18...Bf6 19.0-0 Bxh4!? 20.gxh4 Qxh4 might be possible ) 19.Nxe7+ Qxe7 Black is fine, as 20.Qxd6? Qf6 21.Qd2 ( and not 21.0-0? Rcd8 22.Qc5 Rxd1 23.Rxd1 Nd4! with decisive threats ) 21...Rcd8 22.Qe2 Rxd1+ 23.Kxd1 Qxf2 regains the pawn with the upper hand. ]
17.Qxd5
[ Timman wants to keep the d5-square free for his knight and to retain some pressure down the d-file. Instead the rather strange recapture, 17.exd5?! , didn't lead anywhere after Nb8 18.h5 Na6 19.Bf5 h6 20.Ne3 Nc5 21.Qc2 Bg5 in Pyatin-Utkin, Peterhof 2009, ]
[ but 17.cxd5!? came into consideration. After Nb8 18.Ne3 Na6 19.Nc4 Nc5 20.Qe3 Black has gained a tempo on the two Svetushkin games we considered in the notes to Shirov-Mista, but then again White's bishop has come to h3 in one move. This may not look like much for White, but he has the simple plan of doubling on the c-file and I'm still not sure that the defence is so easy for Black. ]
17...Qc7 18.0-0 a4! Staking out some useful space on the queenside and preparing to embarrass the knight on c2 with ...b3. White will have to move the knight to e3, but then the black knight will jump into d4. Overall, this position seems pretty comfortable for the second player to me. 19.Qd3 Qb7 20.Ne3 Nd4 21.Rac1 Ra5 The rook is bound for c5. Of course White isn't worse here and Black isn't up to very much, but it's not easy for the first player to make progress and Timman's active attempts quickly backfire. 22.Nd5 Bd8 23.f4?
[ Rather ambitiously going for the full point, but Reinderman responds well by fixing the queenside ahead of transferring his queen to a dark-squared role, thereby seizing the initiative. A solid alternative was 23.Rcd1 (leaving the king's rook on f1 to support the f4 push), but after b3 24.a3 Bb6 how can Black be worse with ... Rc5 and ...Qa6 if needed on the way? ]
23...b3! 24.a3 Qa7 The downside to White's hasty 23rd becomes clear. Black is threatening to win the exchange with a discovered check, so there's no time for the f-pawn to push on to f5. 25.Kh1 exf4! The main point of Black's play and a not inconsiderable problem for White. Timman may have blundered and missed this possibility when he went f4 or perhaps he had overestimated his attacking chances.
26.Rcd1 Nc6 27.gxf4!?
[ Going for it. This commits White to a speculative pawn sacrifice, but wasn't such a bad practical choice, especially when one considers the alternative 27.Nxf4 Bc7

28.Nd5 Ne5 . Perhaps Black can only claim an edge here, but defending the white position with weaknesses right across the board would be no easy task over the board. ]

27...Bxh4! Reinderman refuses to be intimidated and grabs the pawn, having realised he has a strong exchange sacrifice in the offing. 28.Bf5 Ne7!

[ I like this pragmatic defence, whereas after 28...g6 29.Qh3 Bd8 30.Rd2! White would have obtained definite pressure for his pawn. ]

29.Bxh7+??

[ And here Timman definitely miscalculates. It really wasn't the Dutch legend's day. White had to go 29.Qh3 whereupon Nxf5! ( 29...Nxd5 30.Qxh4 Nf6 31.Rxd6 doesn't seem so clear at all ) 30.exf5 Rxd5 31.Rxd5 Bf6 would have left Black in the driving seat, with a pawn and raking bishop for the exchange, not to mention much the safer king. That said, the white rooks have some targets here and Timman would most certainly not have been out of the game had this occurred. ]

29...Kxh7 30.Qh3 Rh8! Ouch. The bishop is immune due to the potential skewer on the h-file. Timman tries to bring his rook over to help, but Black has a second rook of his own which can also come to the h-file. 31.Rd2 Kg8 32.Rh2 Rc5 33.Ne3

[ Or 33.Qg4 Nxd5 34.cxd5 Qe7 and there's nothing to be done for White. ]

Gibraltar Masters 14th (6) 31.01.2016
[Vidit,Santosh Gujrathi]

After a slow start I managed to win two games before this round and was eager for a fight. 1.e4 Vidit,S Vidit,S Vidit,S Vidit,S 1...c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 This came as a slight surprise. Before this game, Ly had exclusively played 9.Bxf6. 9...Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c3 Rb8 A move popularized by Boris Gelfand, 11...0-0 was the old main line. Vidit,S: 'A move popularised by Boris Gelfand, 11...0-0 was the old main line. ' 12.Nc2 Bg5 13.a4 bxa4 14.Ncb4 Nxb4 15.cxb4 Although this was a theoretical position my opponent had already spent a considerable amount of time on his last two moves.

15...0-0 16.Qxa4?! This is a rather dubious move. It is very important to keep control over the key d5-square.
[ 16.Rxa4 is considered the main theoretical move. The opening debate is still wide open. Some believe in White's control over the d5-square while some in two bishops! Whose side are you on :) ? ]
16...Bb7
[ 16...f5 is another way to play the position. But I wanted to attack the d5-square right away. 17.exf5 Bxf5 18.Bxa6 Be4 19.Qb3 Kh8 20.0-0 Bxd5 21.Qxd5 Rxb4= ]
17.Rd1?! Now White's position is very unpleasant.
[ 17.Bc4 Qc8! A very important move and now ...Qg4 is a very annoying threat. 18.Qb3 Qg4 19.Qf3 Qxf3 20.gxf3 Rfc8 Black still has a very nice position but the possibility of opposite coloured bishops gives White good drawing possibilities. ]
[ 17.Bxa6 looks like the best Bxd5 18.exd5 e4 19.0-0 f5↑ ( 19...Bd2 20.b5 )]
17...Qc8! An important move. Black has ideas like Bxd5-Qc1 and also ...Qg4.
[ 17...Bxd5!? was the alternative but it looked somewhat too naive. 18.Rxd5 Qc7 19.Bxa6 Qc1+ 20.Rd1 Qxb2 21.b5 Qc3+ 22.Kf1 Bd8 23.h4! Bb6 24.Rh3 Qc7∓ ]
18.Qb3! The most resilient move.
[ 18.Nc3 f5→ ]
18...Bxd5!? This looked like the most direct to me. 19.Rxd5 a5 The most energetic!
20.b5 a4! The a4-pawn continues on its epic suicide journey. 21.Qb4
[ 21.Qxa4 is probably better. Although during the game I was more worried about 21.Qb4. Qc1+ 22.Rd1 Qxb2 23.Bc4 Qc3+! 24.Kf1 Rfc8 25.Bd5 Bd8∓ Black has a dream Sveshnikov. White still needs a lot of time to coordinate the rooks. ]
21...Qc2! My opponent missed this move. It's not easy to defend the b2-pawn.
22.Be2
[ 22.h4 It looks stupid to provoke the B to c1, but it has its pluses. Bd8! ( 22...Bc1 23.Bd3 Qxb2 24.Qxa4 Ra8 25.Qc2 Qb4+ 26.Kf1 Bb2 27.g3 White can still hold on ) 23.Be2 Bb6∓ White still struggles to castle. ]
22...Rfc8 23.b6?!
[ 23.Bd1 was the main line in my calculations. Rc4 24.Bxc2 Rxb4 25.0-0 Rc8! 26.Bd1 Be7∓ and White has to give up one of the pawns. ]
23...Qc1+! I thought for a long time over this move. I was afraid to end up into some sort of opposite coloured bishop endgame. Vidit,S: 'I thought for a long time over this move. I was afraid to end up in some sort of opposite coloured bishop endgame.'
[ 23...Qc6 24.0-0 Rxb6 25.Bb5! is the extra alternative with the direct ...Qc6: Rcb8 26.Bxc6 Rxb4 27.g3 and the game still goes on. ]
24.Rd1 Qc6 Now White doesn't have Bb5! 25.0-0
[ 25.Qxd6 Qxe4-+ ]

25...Rxb6 26.Qa3 Rb3?! An inaccuracy
[ 26...Qxe4 was another option but I didn't want to allow the B to d5. 27.Bf3 Qb4 28.Bd5 ]
[ 26...Rcb8∓ is probably the cleanest win. ]
27.Rxd6! I underestimated this move, but luckily I had a nasty trick up my sleeve!
27...Qxe4 28.Bf3 Qh4
[ 28...Qf4 was my original intention but I missed 30.Rd4 in my calculations. 29.Qa2 e4 ( 29...Rb4∓ ) 30.Rd4!= ]
29.Qa2?
[ 29.g3! White could still offer some resistance with this move. Rxa3 30.gxh4 Rxf3 31.hxg5 Rf5 ( 31...g6 ) 32.h4 g6 33.Kg2 Rb8 34.Ra6 Rb4 35.Kg3 Kg7-+ should win slowly. ]
29...Rxf3! My opponent missed this thematic move. Now White is just lost. 30.gxf3 Bf4-+ 31.Rfd1 Qxh2+
[ 31...e4! was quicker but Qxh2+ seemed clearest during the game. ]
32.Kf1 Qh1+ 33.Ke2 Rc2+ 34.R1d2 Rxd2+ 35.Rxd2 Bxd2 36.Qxa4 Finally the brave a4-pawn meets its doom but it did a brave job, Wouldn't you agree :)?

I would like to address another Black possibility in the Open Catalan that hasn't been covered on ChessPublishing. At first I was going to recommend it for Black, but I changed my mind after discovering the strength and simplicity of 6.a4!? in response to 5...c6. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5!? A simple enough concept, taking the venom out of the main idea behind ...c6, namely to hold on to the c4-pawn with ...b5. 6...d6!? An interesting move. a4 can be quite a useful extra move if White takes on c5 at some point, but Black also gains options from the fact that he doesn't have to fear Qa4 anymore. 7.Bg5 a6! This is the best try at justifying 6... c5. Predojevic considers it the only equaliser against 6.a4 but as you can see my view differs a bit. 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7?! A bit inaccurate as it gives White a good opportunity to latch on to d6. 10.Bxf6! Now Black doesn't have a good way to defend d6. 10...Bxf6 11.c3 Bg5 12.Nc2 Rb8 13.a4 bxa4 14.Ncb4 Nxb4 15.cxb4

In the period 2000-2005 this line proved to be an easy-to-play system against 9.Nd5. Only at the end of 2005 did White find some ideas to put Black under pressure. In the present game Yakovich implements a strong novelty against White's most critical set-up. 14.Nce3 Be6 15.Qf3 Qd7 16.Rd1 The most important thing in these positions is the control over the square on d5. Exchanging pieces on d5 doesn't help Black too much, unless he can force White to recapture on d5 with the pawn. Therefore it is vital for White to always have many pieces supporting the knight on d5. 16...Bd8 17.Be2 It may seem that 17.Bd3 with the idea Bc2-b3 is more logical, but in that case Black has a concrete way to exploit his development advantage.

19.0-0 Qc8!N An important novelty in the most critical position of this opening variation. Earlier it was considered that Black solves all the problems with 19...Bb6, but recently new resources were found for White. The move made by Yakovich is flexible: first of all Black keeps the possibility of coming to g5 with the bishop. Secondly, at this moment it is important to have control over the f5-square. And finally, Black makes the square ond7 available for the bishop, thus being ready to take with the knight on d5 and not fearing that the answer exd5 would trap the bishop on e6.

[ 19...Bb6 Now Black is ready to take on e3, exchanging the bishop that cannot control d5. As a result White won't be able to sufficiently support his knight on d5 with pieces. 20.Nf5! A very strong move. White uses the tactical features of the position to recapture on d5 with pieces.

A) 20...Bxd5 21.Rxd5! Nxd5? 22.Qg4 Qxf5 23.Qxf5 Nf6 24.Rd1+- 1-0 Korneev, O (2671)-Khairullin, I (2544)/Sochi 2006 (48);

C) 20...Nxd5 21.Rxd5! The point of White's idea. Black cannot take the rook. Bxf5 ( 21...Bxd5? 22.Qg4 ) 22.exf5 Qe7 23.Bd3 Rfd8 24.Rd1 Rbc8 25.Be4 There is a long way to go to win this position, but White enjoys a pleasant plus. His space advantage and control over the light squares force Black to defend passively. In the game Kudrin, S (2551)-Eljanov, P (2663)/Khanty Mansiysk 2005 Black wasn't able to defend and lost after a long battle. ]

On the board is well-studied and played almost to the holes Sveshnikov system in the Sicilian defence. So I am not surprising that even such a leading expert, as Alexei Shirov, could not achieve anything by opening, and the game, it would seem, inevitably came to a draw. However, white gradually overplayed his rival and achieve the goal. 19.Qd2 Qd7?! This template move can not be considered as the best.

[Attempt to free the bishop deserve good attention: 19...d3! 20.Rac1 Qb6 21.Rc6! ( 21.b3 Rc3 22.Rxc3 bxc3! 23.Qxd3 g6⩱ ) 21...Qd4! 22.b3 Rxc6 23.dxc6 Rc8 24.Rc1 Qb2 25.Qxb2 Bxb2 26.Bh3! d2 27.Rd1 Rxc6 28.Rxd2 Bf6= ]

20.Rac1?! in chess, one of the most difficult problem is to choose the right place to the rooks. And even great players don't solve it always correctly.

[I think that 20.Rfc1! without removing the protection from the a2 pawn, was better. Now in the case of relatively better d3 21.Rc6 Bd4! 22.Rac1 Bc5 23.e5

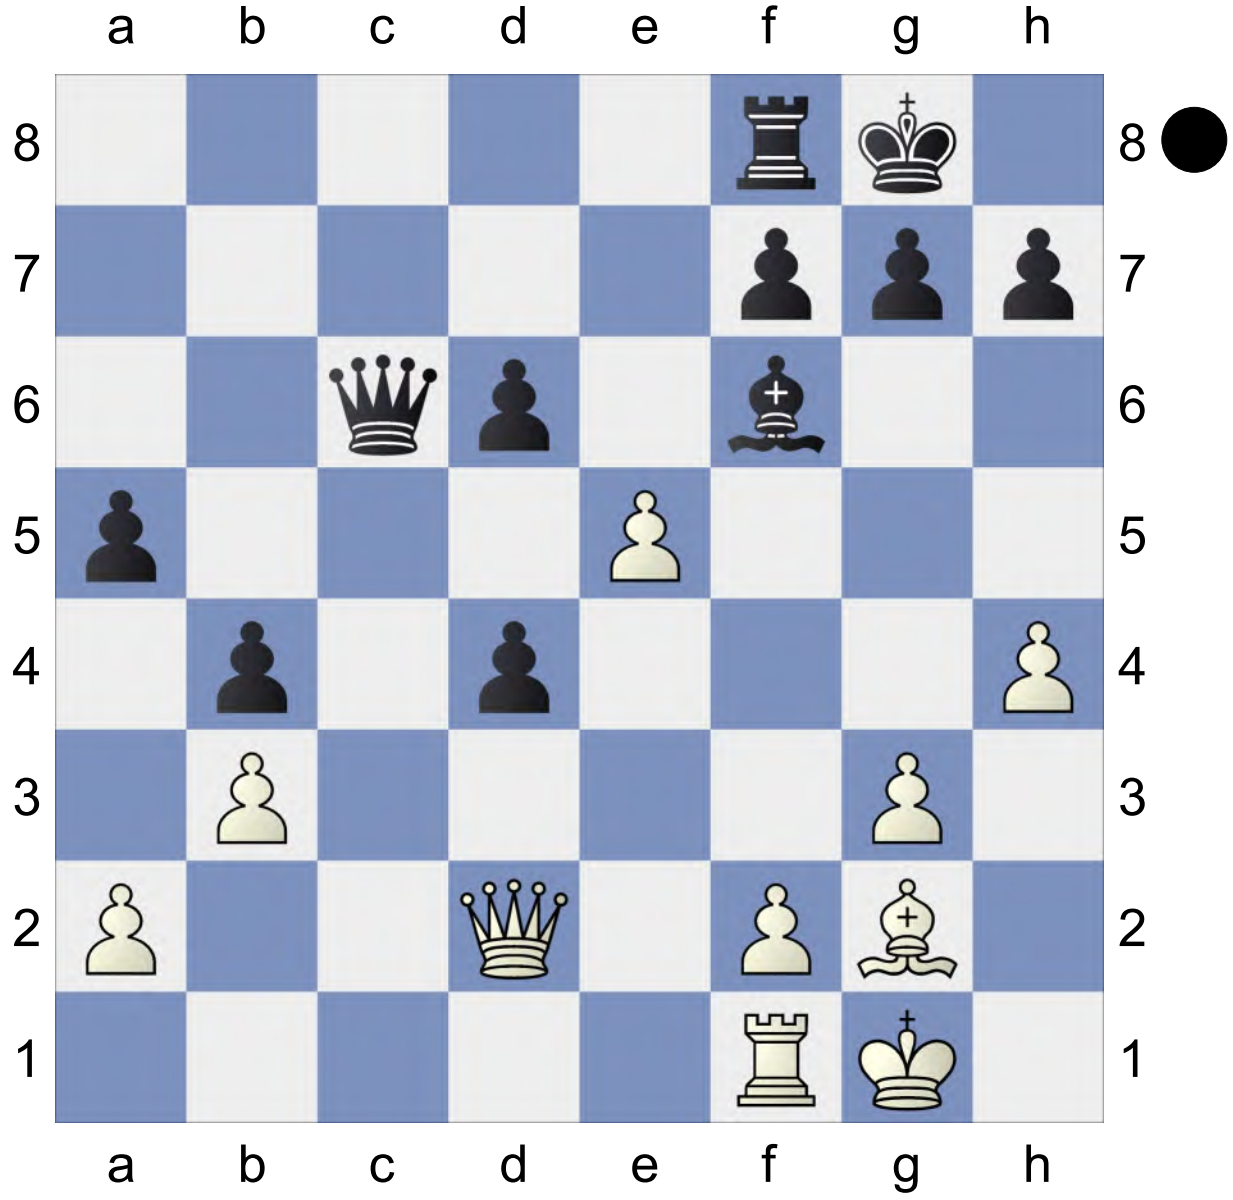
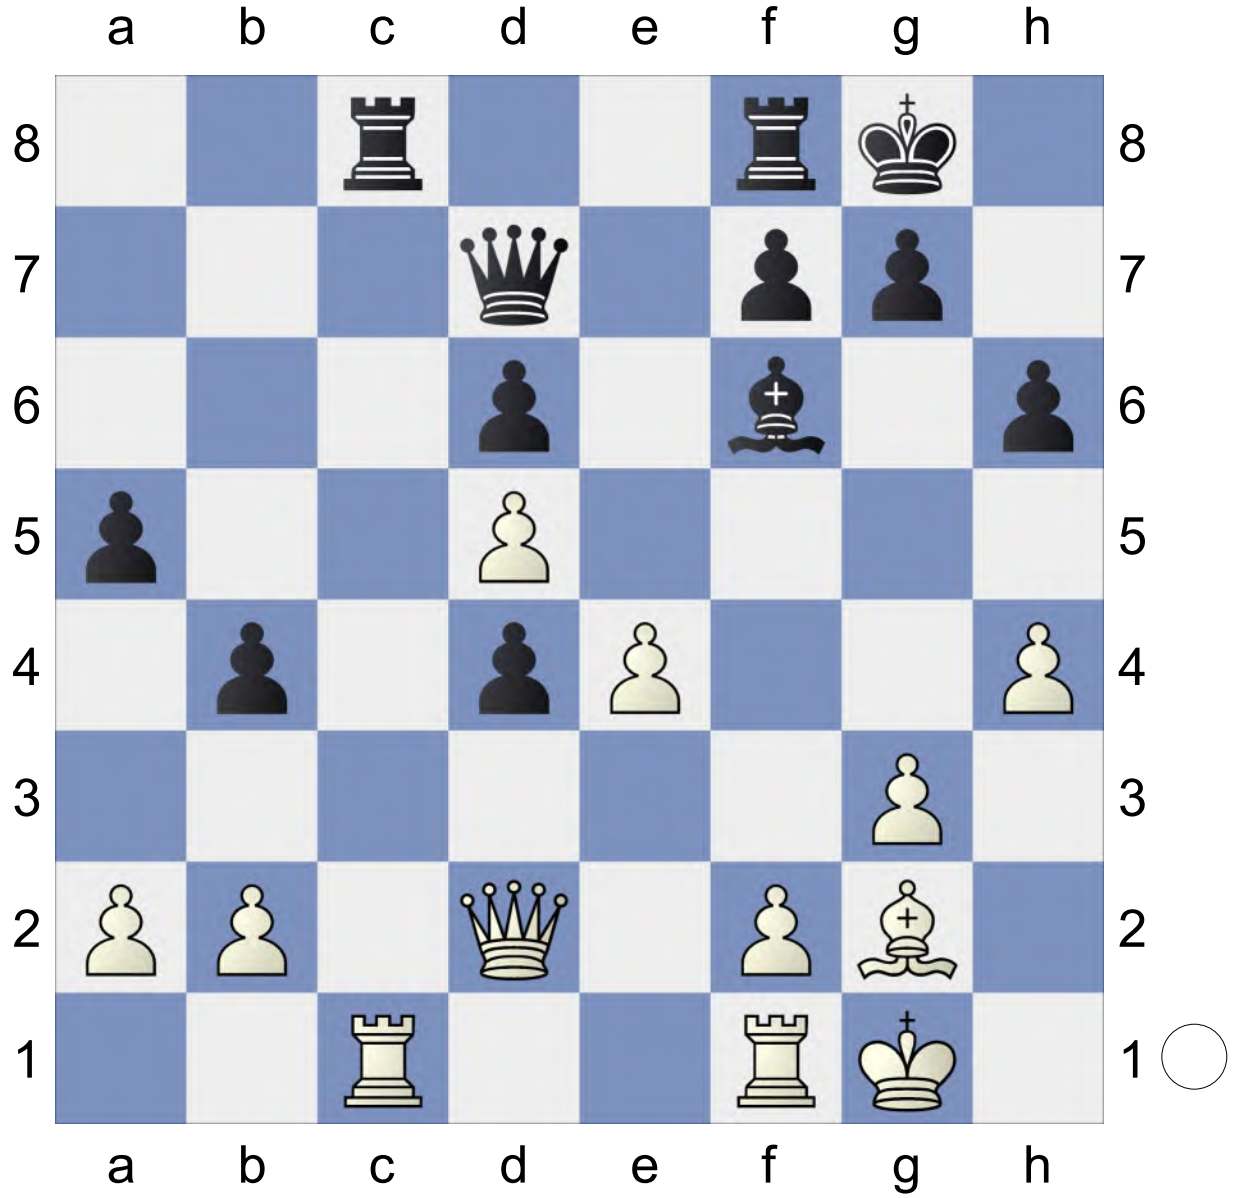
[ Instead of passively observing the slow death of his army, Black could embark on a life-saving counter-attack: 20...Qa4! The point is that in the case of obvious continuation 21.b3 c3-square is strongly attenuated. The question is whether the black will be able to use this fact. ( 21.Rc6 associated with the exchange of pawns a2 and d6.Then black arranges passed pawn on the queenside, and reaches at least draw: Qxa2 22.Rxd6 Be5 23.Ra6 d3 24.Qxd3 Qxb2 25.Rxa5 Rc3 26.Qb1 Qxb1 27.Rxb1 Rb8 28.Bf1 b3 29.Kg2 b2 30.Rb5 Rxb5 31.Bxb5 Rc1 32.Bd3 f6 etc. ) 21...Qd7 22.Rc6 It seems very strong! But let us check the double-take on c6: Rxc6 23.dxc6 Qxc6 24.e5 Äèàãðàìà



One look at this position is enough to give up, but reluctantly teeth continue to fight: Qc3! 25.Qxc3 bxc3! 26.exf6 d3 and inspite of white's extra piece, he can not make even a draw: 27.Be4 d2 28.Bc2 Re8 29.Rd1 Re1+ 30.Kg2 d5-+ ]



Black plays too blithely. Apparently, he had the illusion that the mutual annihilation of all heavy pieces will happen soon with a draw. But no such thing! White immediately punish the opponent, capturing c6 - square. 21.Rc6! Typical and strong solution! White establish an outpost on c6 that will lead either to full control under the c-file or to the formation of a strong passed pawn, and a serious weakening of the light squares. 21...Rxc6? Obediently following the rival's lead. Such moves are possible only as a last resort. To create any sort of counterplay was necessary:

[ 21...b3!? 22.axb3 Rb8 23.Qd3 Rb4 24.Ra1 Rfb8 25.Ra3 Bd8 and white will have much work to do.in order to break through the black's fortress. ]

22.dxc6 Qc7

[ Here 22...Qxc6?? of course, doesn't work due to 23.e5 and the saving maneuver to c3 is unavailable for black queen. ]

23.Rc1+- Here already, in my view, the situation is almost hopeless for black. Later, white still realized hisadvantage, but with some adventures.) 23...Rb8 24.Bf1 Re8 25.Qd3 Kf8 26.Be2 Rb8 27.Bd1 g5 28.hxg5 hxg5 29.Kg2 Kg7 30.Bg4 Rh8 31.b3 Re8 32.Qf3? Something very strange begins to happen. Players start to make serious flaws at every move! There was no need to remove the sight from the d4 pawn, allowing the black's rook to shift to active e5 and c5 squares.

[ The win was close: 32.Bd7! Rd8 ( 32...Re5? 33.Qxd4 Rc5 34.Qd2+- ) 33.Qc4 Rh8 34.Qb5 Rf8 35.Qb7 Bd8 36.Rc4+- ]

32...Re7? Black is afraid even to raise his head!

[ After 32...Re5! black is close to the equalization: 33.Bd7 Rc5 34.Re1 Rc3 35.Qf5 Rc5 36.Qh3 Qd8 37.Rh1 Kf8 38.Qh6+ Ke7 39.Qh5 Kf8 40.Qe2 Qe7 41.Re1 Qe5 ]

33.Bf5?

[ 33.Qf5! led to victory: Re5 34.Qd7! Re7 ( 34...Bd8 35.Qxd8! Qxd8 36.c7 ) 35.Qxc7 Rxc7 36.Bd7 White bishop 'arrested' the rook, and the march of the white king must lead to victory. ]

33...Re8? 34.Bd7? Äèàãðàìà

[ 34.Qh5! Kf8 ( 34...Re5 35.f4 gxf4 36.gxf4 Rc5 37.Qh7+ Kf8 38.e5! Bg7 39.Rg1+- ) 35.Bd7 Re5 36.Qh7 Rc5 37.Rxc5 dxc5 38.Qf5 Be7 ( 38...Kg7 39.f4 ) 39.e5 Kg7 40.Be8 Bd8 41.e6 fxe6 42.Qg6+ Kf8 43.Bd7!+- ]

(Diagram)

Funny, that white is literally forcibly dragged the black rook to the saving place, but it is too stubborn! 34...Rh8? Fail again. But here's the problem, re-examination is canceled!

[ 34...Re5! 35.Rh1 Rc5 36.Qh5 Kf8 etc. ]

[The most aggressive posting for the queen, but 15.Qf3 is an important alternative: d5!? 16.cxd5 fxe4 17.Bxe4 Rb8 18.Rfd1 Qd7 ( 18...Rb6? is playable against 18 Rad1, but not here: as we saw last month, 19.Rac1 already left White better before Black fell for a combo in Z. Almasi-Bokros, Mainz (rapid) 2008*;* however, just as it seems to Kolev and Nedev, the active 18...f5!? 19.d6 Qf6 looks critical to me ) 19.d6 Rb6 20.Qd3 Rd8 21.Rac1 Bf8 prepared to regain the pawn and was a fairly typical Novisibirsk situation in A. Istratescu-I. Khairullin, European Championship, Plovdiv 2008 White has a few tries for an edge, but in all cases Black should be able to hold. The game saw 22.Rc7 Qxc7 23.Bxh7+ Kg7 24.dxc7 Rxd3 25.Bxd3 Bxa3 26.bxa3 Rc6 27.Be4 Rxc7 and was shortly agreed drawn. ]

[Note that 15.cxb5?! isn't a move White should really be considering - Black just has a strong initiative after d5! 16.exd5 e4 , as Tony demonstrated in his notes to Cheparinov-Carlsen, Wijk aan Zee 2005. ]

15...Rb8!? Once again Black is happy to sacrifice a pawn. 16.exf5 e4 17.Rae1 Bb7 18.Qg4

[White reroutes his queen with tempo, but this is by no means his only idea. For 18.cxb5!? and the alternatives, please see T.Horvath-Nedev, Feugen 2006, in the Archive. ]

18...Rfe8

[Kolev and Nedev, following Cox, suggest 18...Kh8!? , which looks like a pretty decent alternative. The main point is to meet 19.Bxe4 with Rfe8! , after which their 20.Re3 Bxe4 21.Rfe1 Qf6 22.Rxe4 Rxe4 23.Qxe4 Qxb2 gives Black fairly promising activity. ]

19.cxb5 d5 20.bxa6 Bc6 21.Be2!? A novelty and one which Najer may well have burnt some midnight oil over for this is quite a critical and theoretical position. White simply gets his bishop off prise and prepares to improve his rooks. First evidence suggests that this is fairly dangerous, although it's not the only avenue for white players to explore:

[a) 21.a7 Rxb2 22.Rc1 isn't at all clear, but h5! , while not always played, should do the trick: 23.Qxh5? exd3 24.Rxc6 is impossible on account of the decisive Rxf2! . ]

[b) 21.f3 h5 *(*Rogozenko has proposed 21...Rxb2!? 22.fxe4 Kh8 ) 22.Qg3 Qe5 23.Qxe5 Bxe5 24.fxe4 dxe4 was also far from easy to assess in Kotronias-

Avrukh, Kavala 2003 Black enjoys the bishop-pair and some quite active pieces, but that passed pawn on a6 should never be underestimated. ]

21...Rxb2

[ Black activates his rook and regains one of the sacrificed pawns. This appears best, especially as 21...Kh8?! is slow: 22.Rc1 Bd7 23.Rc7 and White should be better, as the continuation Bxb2 24.a7 Rbc8 25.Nb5 vindicates. ]

22.Rc1 h5!

[ A common motif in this variation. Yakovich has no wish to be pinned by 22...Bd7 23.Rc7 , ]

[ and the immediate 22...Ba4 would also have been met by 23.Rc7! , since Qxc7?? 24.f6 leads to mate. ]

23.Qxh5 Ba4 24.f6! A big decision, but seemingly a good one. The board is very much on fire after this, but White seems to maintain the upper hand no matter what Black tries. 24...Bxf6

[ 24...Qxf6 25.Qxd5 Rxe2 26.Qc4 is similar, but even worse for Black. ]

25.Qxd5 Rxe2

[ I had hoped to make 25...Rd8? work, but now comes vicious point number one: 26.Qh5 Qxa3 27.Rc7 and the combination of the a-pawn and White's attack is crushing, as Bd7 ( or 27...Qf8 28.a7 Rbd2 29.Bc4 R2d7 30.Rxd7! Rxd7 31.Qg4+ Kh8 32.Qxd7 Bxd7 33.Bd5 - cute! ) 28.Bc4 Qe7 29.a7 Bd4 30.Bxf7+ Qxf7 31.Qxf7+ Kxf7 32.Rxd7+! neatly demonstrates. ]

26.Qc4 Point number two, as one of Herr Fritz or Rybka may well have confirmed in advance - White regains his piece. 26...Qxa3?

[ Playing with the bishop-pair against a rook on an open board looks sensible enough, but once again the combination of White's a-pawn and Black's exposed king is a dangerous one for Yakovich. Critical must thus be 26...Rb2! 27.Qxa4 Rxa2 when White presumably intended 28.Rc7 Qf8 29.Qc6 Be5 30.Nb5 . This looks rather dangerous, but Black might just be able to hold with e3! : for example, 31.fxe3 Bxc7 32.Nxc7 Rxe3 33.a7 Rxa7 34.Nd5 (White will regain the exchange, but that is not the end of the story...) Re6 35.Nf6+ Kg7 36.Qc4 Rxf6 37.Rxf6 Kxf6 38.Qd4+ Kg6 39.Qxa7 and Black escapes to a queen ending with f against g and h. I wonder what the well-prepared Najer intended here, if indeed he got this far. Quite possibly he realised that Yakovich was unlikely to find so many precise defensive moves over the board, and that even if he did, White could still try to torture in the queen ending. ]

27.Qxe2 Qd3

[ White isn't going to trade queens after this, but neither would 27...Bd7 have helped Black: 28.Rc7 ( 28.Rfd1 Be6 29.Rc6 may well be even stronger ) 28...Be6 29.a7!? ( ambitious 29.Qb5 Rd8 30.a7 would hold the extra pawn ) 29...Bd4 30.Qb5 Rf8 31.Qg5+ Kh7 32.Qh4+ Kg8 33.Qxe4 Bxa7 34.Qe5 and, although Black has picked up the advanced a-pawn, problems remain: his king is shorn of cover and White has a couple of extra pawns. ]

28.Qg4+! Kf8 29.a7! Bd4

[ Scurrying back with 29...Qa6 is also well met by 30.Qf5! : for example, Be5 31.Rc5 Bd6 32.Ra5 Qc6 33.Qg5 and Black's defences are stretched to breaking point. ]

30.Qf5 Fine aggression from Najer. Black will now pick up the a-pawn, but White will emerge with at the very least a highly favourable endgame. 30...Bxa7 31.Rc7 Re7 32.Qc8+ Be8 33.Rxe7 Kxe7 34.Qb7+ Qd7 35.Qxe4+ Yakovich has managed not to lose a bishop, but his cause is hopeless nonetheless. Possibly if his pieces were active and well co-ordinated, he might have a chance to resist, but they aren't and Najer now displays sufficiently good technique to bring home the full point. 35...Kf8 36.Re1

[ 36.Qb4+!? Kg7 37.Re1 would avoid the possible defence mentioned in our next note, since here Bd4? fails to 38.Rxe8! . ]

36...Bc5

[ The machine suggests that 36...Bd4!? 37.h4 f6 might have been worth a try, with some chances to resist, although I suspect in an ultimately futile cause. ]

37.h4 f6 38.Qa8 Bb4 39.Re4 Kf7?!

[ This just helps White improve his wandering queen: 39...Qd1+ 40.Kh2 Be7 looks like a better defence, but no doubt Yakovich was by now extremely low on time. ]

40.Qa6 Bd6 41.Qc4+! Kf8 42.Qd4 Qd8 43.g3 Bf7 44.Qd2 Qd7

[ Now f6 goes and with it the game, but 44...Bg6 45.Re6 Bc7 46.Qxd8+ Bxd8 47.a4 Bf7 48.Ra6 would also have been decisive: the bishop-pair is a powerful weapon, but not powerful enough to halt two passed rook pawns. ]

14...Bg7 15.Qh5 e4 16.Bc2 Qc8 17.Rae1 0-0 18.Bb3 This logical move is new for our site. The Pd5 is protected, while the c2-spot is vacated for the knight.

[ The most common continuation here is 18.Kh1 Ng6 19.Bb1 , but Black should have enough counterplay after b4 20.cxb4 Bxb2 21.Nc2 Bc3 22.Re2 ( Another game from our PGN Archive ended in a draw after 22.Rc1 Bb2 23.Rce1 Bc3 24.Rc1 Bb2 Galkin,A (2587)-Krasenkow,M (2702) Saint Vincent 2000 [Fed] ) 22...Bg7 23.f4 exf3 24.Qxf3 f4 25.Ne1 Qc4 26.Qe4 Rfc8 27.Nd3 a5= Leko,P (2701)-Krasenkow,M (2647) Batumi 1999 [Fed] ]

[ Another important line starts with 18.f3 b4! and was covered in Nataf,I (2565) - Spasov,V (2534) Mallorca 2004 [TonyK]. The wild complications that arise shouldn't bother Black. ]

18...Ng6?! This natural move (the knight is heading to e5 or f4) turns out to be a loss of time.

[ I am wondering what Pierre prepared (possibly he was just checking his opponent's knowledge!) after 18...a5! , which is considered to be a convincing way to solve Black's problems. We will cover the most important theoretical paths: Possibly the most tricky is:

A) 19.f3 a4 20.Bd1 Qc5+ 21.Kh1 e3 22.f4 Nxd5 23.Qxf5 b4 24.cxb4 Nxb4 25.Qxc5 dxc5 26.Rxe3 Nxa2 leads to an equal endgame.;

B) 19.Qg5 Qb7! 20.f3 h6! The poor placement of the minor pieces stops White from developing any attack on the k-side: 21.Qf4 ( 21.Qg3 a4 22.Bc2 b4 23.Nc4 Qxd5 24.fxe4 Qxc4 25.exf5 Nd5 26.f6 Nxf6 27.Rxf6 Rae8= Kanmazalp,O -Firat,B / Kocaeli TUR 2015 ) 21...a4 22.Bc2 b4 23.cxb4 Qxb4 24.fxe4 Ng6 25.Qxf5 Bxb2∓ Shirov,A - Grischuk,A / Wijk aan Zee 2003;

C) 19.Nxb5!? , forcing Black to make a couple of precise moves: 19...a4 20.Bd1 Qc5 21.Be2 *(*The over-aggressive 21.Nd4 Qxd5 22.Re3 Rfb8 23.Rh3?! as played in Vallejo Pons,F - Van Wely,L / Bled 2002 should be bravely met by: Rxb2! 24.Qxh7+ Kf8∓ and Black's king is quite safe, whereas the Pa4 would become a powerful passer. ) 21...Nxd5 22.Qg5 ( 22.Qxf5 Nxc3 23.Qxc5 Nxe2+ 24.Rxe2 dxc5= ) 22...h6 23.Qg3 Asrian,K -Ni,H / Beersheba 2005 Rab8 24.Nxd6 f4 25.Nxe4 fxg3 26.Nxc5 Rxb2 27.Nxa4 Rxa2= ]

19.Nc2 a5 A novelty.

[ In the following high-level game Black was suffering from his exposed k-side pawn structure: 19...Re8 20.f4 exf3 *(*Perhaps better would be: 20...a5 21.Ne3 a4 22.Bc2 Ne7 23.a3 b4 24.cxb4 Bxb2 25.Kh1 , but even then Black would be under definite pressure. ) 21.Rxe8+ Qxe8 22.Qxf3 f4 23.Re1 Qd7 24.Nb4± Ponomariov,R - Anand,V / Mainz 2002 ]

[ 19...Nf4 20.Qg5 Nd3 21.Ne3! Qd8 22.Qxf5 Nxe1 23.Rxe1 Re8 24.Bc2 Re5 25.Qf4 Qd7 26.g4± ]

20.Ne3 a4? An over-optimistic attempt to disturb White on the q-side. Black is provoking White's next move, but it is actually a part of his attacking plan.

[ Much better would be: 20...Ne7! admitting the previous mistake. In this case White would have to play very precisely in order to maintain his advantage: 21.Qg5 Ra7 22.Bc2 Kh8 ( 22...b4 23.cxb4 axb4 24.Bb3 Rc7 25.f3± ) 23.f3 Rg8 24.Qh5 Be5 25.Kh1 b4 26.g3 bxc3 27.bxc3 Qxc3 28.Re2!± *(*Wrong is 28.fxe4?! f4 29.gxf4 Bxf4⇄ )]

21.Bc2 a3? Francesco definitely underestimates White's attacking potential! This careless move could have led to a quick disaster.

[ Necessary was: 21...Ne7 22.Qg5 Ra7 23.a3! Kh8 24.Kh1 Be5 25.f4± , though Black would be doomed to a passive defence. ]

22.Nxf5 axb2 23.Rxe4? A serious mistake, that spoils the lion's part of his advantage.

[ Much better was: 23.Re3! Re8 ( 23...Nf4 24.Qg4 Ng6 25.Bxe4 Re8 26.h4+- ) 24.Nxd6 Re5 25.Qxe5 Nxe5 26.Nxc8 Rxc8 27.Bxe4 Nc4 28.Rh3 Despite the strong Pb2, White's position should be winning - the material advantage is too big. ]

23...Qxc3 24.Bb1?! Pierre's play is too slow for such a sharp position.

[ More in the spirit of the position was: 24.Rh4 h6 ( 24...Rfc8 25.Qxh7+ Kf8 26.Rh3 Qf6 27.Bb1↑ ) 25.Nxh6+ Bxh6 26.Qxh6 Qg7 27.Qxg7+ Kxg7 28.Rb4 Rxa2 29.Bb1 Ra5 30.Rxb2 Rb8± and Black would have to fight for a draw in the ensuing endgame. ]

24...Rfe8 Now Black manages to simplify matters. 25.Nxd6 Rxe4 26.Nxe4 White is a pawn up now, but the strong Pb2 is a cause of worry. 26...Qc1? This optimistic move invites new trouble.

[ Black had to neutralize the activity of White's queen: 26...Nf4! 27.Qg4 Qe5 28.d6 f5 29.Nf6+ Kh8 30.Qf3 Rd8 31.Nh5 Nxh5 32.Qxh5 Rxd6= , solving all the problems. ]

27.d6! Now it's not easy to avoid a further loss of material. 27...Nf4? Mistakes rarely come alone! This pseudo-active move leads to the loss of another pawn.
[ The only way to set-up some resistance was: 27...Qc6 28.Rd1 Rd8 29.Qg5 Rc8 30.Qf5 h6± ]
28.Qxb5 Ne6 29.g3 The strong Pb2 still requires some accuracy, but White is winning. 29...Nd4 30.Qd5 Rd8

KAMPFSCHACH PAR EXCELLENCE On the 13th of December I had an early Christmas present by way of a chance to play against Vishy Anand in the German Bundesliga. They say giving's important as well, and I gave it all I could, but it wasn't quite enough... 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 f5 11.c3 Bg7 12.Bd3 Be6 13.Qh5 0-0 14.0-0 f4

I couldn't help smirking when I glanced over at the second board of the match, where Zbynek Hracek was playing White for my team against Alexei Shirov and reached the same position! Zbynek chose 15.Rfd1, but Vishy decided to surprise me. 15.Nc2 "?!. A remarkable position. Three pawns down the drain, but three mega pawns in the centre. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 In some cases this restrains Pe4 sufficient to allow ... Ng8-f6, but in some other cases Black needs more control of e5.

[ 2...d6 ]

3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 Now Black has to decide how to prevent Nxc6 and e4-e5. To that end Black has played ...d6 (Scheveningen) , ...e5 (Sveshnikov) and ... Qb6 (Benko) . All have good qualities. 5...e5 6.Ndb5 If White doesn't try to exploit the weakness at d6 then his pieces become too passive. 6...d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 threatening ...b4 and preventing Na3-c4-e3 9.Bxf6

[ 9.Nd5 ]

9...gxf6 It seems odd that Black would allow such a pawn structure, but he can't easily be prevented from ...f6-f5xe4 to give him an advantage in central pawns. That the position has many weaknesses gives White room to develop and fight for a win.
10.Nd5 Bg7 11.c3 f5 12.Bd3
[ 12.exf5 Bxf5 13.Qf3 Be6 ]
[ 12.Nc2?! fxe4 and Nc2 doesn't exactly fit into any part of the board. With Black ready to play ...f5 the king-side is safe and Nd5 occupies the most useful central square, so that leaves b4. But, moving Nc2-b4 doesn't serve much purpose at this point; only after a2-a4 softens up the queen-side would Nc2-b4 possibly become useful. ]
12...Ne7 After Ne7 it appears Black might prefer ...Bc8-b7, as is played in many Sicilian Defense games, to cut through the center of the board and to aim at Pg2, where White's king might soon reside.
[ 12...Be6 ]
13.Nxe7 Qxe7 14.0-0
[ 14.exf5 is consistent with the threat established by Bf1-d3, but it's unclear whether White can hold the pawn because of Black's mobile central pawns and generally good piece

14...0-0 15.Nc2 Seeing that the piece needed to be improved and that d5 would be a good spot for it, she moves it now. 15...f4 It might be a little unusual to use this move when Bg7 blocks the g-file, but Kasparov has played the King's Indian Defense many times and understands how to handle the weak d5 and the open g-file. In this case he might not aim directly for an attack on Pg2 and Kg1. Instead he might just be preventing Ne3 or exf5, so he can return to ...Bc8-b7 with either ... f5 or ...d5 soon to follow. Kasparov is very much about achieving good overall piece activity. 16.a4 bxa4 17.Rxa4 Qg5 threatening ...Bh3 to checkmate with ...Qxg2# or to force g2-g3, so ...Bh3xf1 will win material and continue to weaken Kg1 18.f3 Bf6 19.Bc4 Kh8 These moves are very much taken from a King's Indian Defense player's repertoire.
20.Rf2?
[ 20.Qd2 Rg8 21.Rfa1 coordinates the pieces a little better. Rf2 isn't good. ]
20...Be7 21.Nb4 d5!? Kasparov is always on the lookout for tactical shots which he can use to win or confuse the opponent. 22.Bxd5 Bc5 offering Ra8 is just the sort of audacious thing Kasparov is noted for. But, don't think it's just a bluff. He's calculated variations to determine if his compensation is sufficient. 23.Bxa8 Rg8 24.Kf1

[ 25.Kxf2 Qxg2+ 26.Ke1 Qxb2 and the threat of ...Rg1# is very strong ]

25...Qxg2 26.Kd3 Material is nominally equal, but the exposed Kd3 could be a problem. 26...Be3 27.Bd5 Qxh2 28.Kc4 Rg1 29.Qd3 Bh3 It's odd to see all these Black pieces cramped into the corner, but Black threatens ...Bf1 to win a queen! 30.Kb3 Bf1 31.Qc2 Qxc2+ It's a little surprising, after what had gone before, to see simplification; Black has a passed Ph7 and wants to advance it, so the h-file had to be cleared.

[ 31...Rg2 32.Qb1 Bb5 33.Ra5 and White is somewhat coordinated and threatening Nxa6 to gain more space ]

32.Kxc2 Kg7 33.c4 Be2 I suppose he's decided he can't just run Ph7 forward because Pc4 is also in good shape to advance and White's pieces might suddenly swarm Kg7. So, he has to continue the fight and await further simplifications when his king will be safer, then the pawns can advance. 34.Rxa6 Bd1+ prevents White's king from running to a2 (via b3) to get away from checks

Novokuznetsk (1) 03.09.2008
[Richard Palliser]

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 f5 11.Bd3 Be6 12.0-0 Bxd5 13.exd5 Ne7 14.Re1 This variation was popular a few years ago, but since then Black has uncovered sufficient defensive resources. 14...Bg7 15.c3 0-0 16.Qh5 e4 17.Bf1 Re8

[ As I mentioned last month, 17...Qc8 should also do the trick: 18.Rad1 Re8! 19.Nc2 Ng6 and practice suggests that having covered his more-sensitive points, Black should be fine. ]

18.Rad1 Ng6!?

[ This has also been employed by Krasenkow, but there's no need for Black to sacrifice a pawn. The simple 18...Rc8 is a good and quite possibly superior alternative, since 19.Nc2 ( Kolev and Nedev analyse the more critical 19.Re3!? , but their Rc5 20.c4 bxc4 21.Rh3 h6 22.Nxc4 Nxd5 23.Qxf5 e3! seems likely to lead after some further tactics to a level endgame - see 'The Easiest Sicilian' for details ) 19...Rc5 20.Ne3 f4 is clearly pretty comfortable for Black. ]

19.Qxf5 Re5 20.Qh3

[ White avoids giving Black a tempo with his f-pawn, although now ... Nf4 can (and should!) come with tempo. The alternative is 20.Qg4!? f5 21.Qg3 , which Kolev and Nedev suggest isn't entirely convincing for Black: f4 22.Qg4 Qf6 23.Nc2 Rae8 24.Nd4! Rxd5 25.a4 certainly left White slightly for choice in Zude-Srienz, Dresden 2007. ]

20...Qf6?

[ A strange novelty. Moreover, Tregubov has been a leading Sveshnikov adherent for many years now, but perhaps had only analysed 9 Nd5 lines of late and so mixed up his old analysis. Correct is 20...Nf4! when 21.Qg3 Qf6 is quite possibly what Tregubov intended. Indeed, he'd been here before and 22.Nc2 ( 22.c4!? is probably more critical, although Black was able to hold after b4 23.Nc2 a5

24.Qe3 Nd3! in 'Zor champ'-Rajlich, online freestyle 2006 but one game which is well annotated in John Cox's 'Starting Out: the Sveshnikov' ) 22...Kh8 23.Kh1 Rae8 24.Qe3 Nxd5 25.Qd2 Rd8 certainly seemed fine for him in Alekseev-Tregubov, Sochi 2005. ]

21.g3! The problem: now Black's knight cannot reach f4 and with White able to train his forces on e4, Black appears to lack sufficient counterplay. 21...Qg5 22.Bg2 f5 23.Nc2 Rae8 24.Nb4

[ Not the only good move. Probing with 24.Nd4!? was also promising, based on the neat tactic Rxd5 25.Nf3! Rxd1 26.Qxh7+ Kxh7 27.Nxg5+ Kh6 28.Nf7+ Kh7 29.Rxd1 when White maintains his extra pawn, although Black has his usual Sveshnikov drawing hopes due to the presence of opposite-coloured bishops. ]

24...f4!?

[ In a pretty grim position, Tregubov stakes everything on this active approach. The passive alternative was 24...Ne7 when White should probably just begin to improve his pieces with the calm 25.Re2!? , whereas the machine's ( 25.f4 exf3 26.Rxe5 dxe5 27.Bxf3 doesn't look so clear after e4 28.Be2 Qe3+ 29.Kf1 Ng6 30.Nc2 Qb6 : Black has some definite practical chances here, even if objectively they should be insufficient. )]

25.Nc6! Rxd5 26.Qd7 Kf8 27.h4 Smikovski continues to force the play, but Tregubov had presumably calculated that he could survive this onslaught of tempo-gaining moves. 27...Qh5

[ The alternative was 27...Rxd1 28.Rxd1 Qh5 , but then White has at least 29.g4!? Qxh4 30.Qxd6+ Kg8 31.Qd7 with an extra pawn and the initiative. ]

28.Bf3 Qf5 29.Bg4?!

[ Not too bad, but 29.Qxf5+! Rxf5 30.Bxe4 would have been somewhat stronger. After Rf6 31.Bc2 Black's pawns are loose and his pieces not too well co-ordinated, although the opposite-coloured bishops still give him a few (slim) hopes of drawing. Note the key role played by White's bishop down the b1-h7 diagonal and also Black's lack of counterplay, especially when compared with what soon occurs in the game. ]

29...Qxd7 30.Bxd7 Rxd1 31.Rxd1 Ra8 32.Rxd6 fxg3 33.fxg3 Ne5 This is the problem for White. His majority on the flanks is all well and good, but Black will manage to stir up some counterplay with his e-pawn. 34.Bf5 e3 35.Nd4 Nc4 36.Rd7?

[ Quite possibly a time trouble slip or perhaps Smikovski had dreams of landing a big check on f7. Instead he should have got behind the e-pawn with 36.Re6 when Nxb2 37.Rxe3 Nc4 38.Re6 Ra7 would have given Black some chances to hold, but White can probe for a long time here. ]

36...Bxd4! 37.Rxd4

[ White has to misplace his rook thus, as 37.cxd4?? e2 38.Kf2 Re8 39.Ke1 Ne3 would have been rather embarrassing. ]

37...Nxb2 38.Kf1 Na4 39.Rd3 Ra7 40.Rxe3 Rc7 Thus White has rounded up the e-pawn after all, but his queenside has been weakened and that promises Black enough counterplay to keep White's advantage within manageable bounds. 41.Re6 a5 42.Ra6 Nxc3 43.Rxa5 Rf7! A further pawn liquidation will help the defender. 44.g4 h5 45.Kg2 hxg4 46.Bxg4 Rf4 47.Ra8+

[ White didn't have to check, but 47.Kg3 Ra4! 48.Rxa4 bxa4 49.Be6 Ke7 50.Bc4 Kf6 51.Kg4 Kg7 would have led to a similarly drawn situation. White can't win on the kingside, but neither does bringing his king across help him, as we'll see. ]

47...Kg7 48.Kh3 Ra4! Precise defence by Tregubov, which exploits the fact that even in some FIDE semi-ludicrous blitz finish, B+K v K is a draw! 49.Rb8

[ Smikovski tries to do a bit of torturing after this, but Tregubov is much too experienced to run into any further difficulties at this stage. However, 49.Rxa4 bxa4 50.Be6 Kf6 51.Bg8 Kf5 would have led to an immediate draw: 52.Kg3 a3 53.Kf3 Nb5 54.Bh7+ Kf6 55.Bd3 Nc3 and White is hampered by the fact that 56.Bc4 Kf5 57.Bb3 Kg6 58.Ke3 will always run into Kh5 59.Kd4 Nxa2 60.Bxa2 Kxh4 . ]

49...Rxa2 50.h5 Ne4 51.Rb7+ Kh8 52.Bf5 Ra3+ 53.Kg2 Nd6 54.Rh7+ Kg8 55.Bg6 Ra8 56.Rd7 Nc4 57.Rb7 Nd6 58.Rb6 Nf7 Even without the b-pawn it's a draw, and not too tricky a one to hold at that. 59.Kg3 Rd8 60.Kf4 Rd1 61.Kf5 Rd5+ 62.Ke4 Rd1 63.Rb8+ Kg7 64.Bxf7 Kxf7 65.Rxb5

[ The other knight retreat 6.Nf3 isn't dangerous either, but like after 6.Nb3 I think Black should refrain from entering the complications by taking the pawn on e4. Bb4

(Diagram)

A) 7.Bd2 Bxc3! 8.Bxc3 Nxe4 with the knight on b3, White could play now Qg4. After 9.Nxe5 ( 9.Bxe5? Nxe5 10.Nxe5 Qa5+ drops a piece. ) 9...Nxc3 10.Nxc6 Nxd1 11.Nxd8 Nxb2 12.Nxb7 Bxb7 13.Rb1 Bxg2! 14.Bxg2 Rb8 Black is just a healthy pawn up.;
B) 7.Bg5 is pretty harmless and can best be met by h6! I like the following amateur vs. master game: 8.Bxf6 Qxf6 9.a3? (waste of time) Bxc3+ 10.bxc3 d6 11.h3 0-0 12.Rb1 b6 13.Bc4 Be6 14.Bd5 Rac8 15.Qd3 ( 15.0-0 Na5! is bad for White. ) 15...Na5 16.Nd2 Qg6 17.Ke2? ( 17.Bxe6 Qxe6 18.0-0 Rc6 followed by ...Rfc8 with a big advantage. ) 17...Bxd5 18.exd5 f5 19.f3? Qxg2+ 0-1 Laban-Miljkovic, Belgrade 2019.;

7.Bd2

[ 7.Bc4 0-0 *(*More precise than the immediate 7...Nxe4 as White has 8.Bxf7+ )

A) 8.Bg5 h6! 9.Bh4 ( 9.Bxf6 Bxc3+ 10.bxc3 Qxf6 slightly favors Black, as the doubled c-pawns will be more vulnerable than Black's backward d-pawn. ) 9...Bxc3+ 10.bxc3 d6 11.Qd3 Be6 12.Rd1 Bxc4 13.Qxc4 Rc8 14.Qd3 Qe7 followed by Rfd8 gives Black a clearly better position in Suto-Martin Clemente, ICCF 2004.;

B) 8.Qd3 has even been played once by Ivanchuk in World blitz 2017, though after d5! Black obtains an excellent game:

B1) 9.exd5 e4 10.Qe3 and now rather than taking on d5, in my opinion ( 10.Qg3? goes from to bad to worse after Bd6 11.Qh4 Ne5 12.Be2 Ng6 13.Qg5 Re8 followed by ... h6 after which Black places his knight on f4. ) 10...Ne7!? is more ambitious, e.g. 11.0-0 Qc7 12.Be2 Nf5 13.Qd2 Rd8 and Black retains the better prospects in Delport-Boesenberg, ICCF 2017.;

B2) 9.Bxd5 Nxd5 10.exd5 Ne7 11.0-0 Bf5 12.Qe2 Bxc3 13.bxc3 Qxd5 and thanks to a favorable pawnstructure Black has been ensured a stable edge.;

Penultimate round of the tournament, I was still hunt for the leader of the tournament (Fier),half a point behind. This time I was facing MI Molina (who was tied with me on points), always a tough opponent, especially with White. Let´s go to the battle! 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 The choice of Dutch opening, shows quickly my ambition for the game. 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3!? This is was not my opponent´s main weapon against the Dutch, but it was one of the expected line for this game in my preparation. 5...e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5! It is important to keep the bishops in the board. Because of this, the White knight is poorly positioned on h3 for now. 9.Bxf6 gxf6! A good move to control important squares on the kingside. Furthermore, Black now has possibilities to advance with ...g5 in the future. 10.Nd5 This move was a big surprise for me in the game. 10...f5 11.Bd3 Be6! As my game with Fier, the a-pawn advance in order to fight against a knight in b3. 12.c4

[This move does involve a pawn sacrifice, though, and lots of less committal plans are available: John Cox: 'a)' 17...Qd7 aims to get both rooks behind the pawn duo; for example, 18.Rad1 f4 19.Nd4 Rae8 20.f3 e3 with an unclear position. Rogozenko suggests that 18 f3 upsets the applecart, and that if Black wants to play this set-up he should introduce it by 16...Qd7, when 17 Rad1 (17 Nc2? drops the d-pawn) 17...0-0 18 Nc2 is a transposition, but 17 f3 can be met with 17...b4, when 18 cxb4 does now lose material because Black has ...Qa4 after Rb3, defending the bishop. ]

[John Cox: 'b)' 17...Qc8 aims to meet 18 f3? with 18...Qc5+, but it's artificial not to connect the rooks and the straightforward 18.Rad1 Ng6 19.f4 has proved good for White in several games, whether Black takes or not (if he doesn't Qh3 and Ne3 is powerful). ]

[John Cox: 'c)' 17...Re8 is a typical move in such structures to prepare ...Ng6 (the point is that after Qxf5 Re5 White cannot keep the e-pawn under observation with the queen and so Black regains the d-pawn in peace). It seems, however, that the natural sequence 18.Rad1 Ng6 *(*it is too late to transpose to the next line by 18...Rc8 19.f3 b4 20.Nxb4 Qb6+ 21.Kh1 a5 22.Nc6 Nxc6 23.dxc6 because it turns out that ... 1.e4 Bologan Bologan,V This was the decisive game in order to qualify for the tie-breaks for the World Cup 2007. This year due to a big number of participants and also to the small number of qualification places (29 instead of the announced 33) a +4 result was not enough to qualify. 1...c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 For some reason my recent results in this system went down especially when I switched to 9.f4. 9.Nd5 For this game I decided to return to my old favourite move taught to me by Lanka. 9...Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c3 Bg5 12.Nc2 Rb8 13.a4 Perhaps this move allows Black to transpose the game into favorable 9.f4 lines. Instead I would be better to take on c6 myself. 13...bxa4!N 14.Ncb4 Bd7 15.Bxa6 A typical manoeuvre for the Rauzer. The knight anyway will have to leave the square c3 after b5-b4. 15...Nxb4 16.Nxb4 Qa5 17.Qxd6 Rb6 18.Qd3 Be7 Here I was afraid of 19.Nd5 Rxb2 20.0-0 Bc5 21.Qg3 Kf8?! An inaccurate move. Better was to take under control the g file:

11.c4!?

[This uncompromising approach is quite a rare choice these days, especially when compared with the much more common 11.Bd3 . ]

11...f5! Black must get his counterplay under way without delay. 12.cxb5 Nd4 13.b6!? Malisauskas decides to keep the extra pawn, but in this new position for ChessPub previous games have also debated:

[a) 13.bxa6 0-0 14.Nb5 fxe4 15.Nbc7 Ra7 *(*Kostakiev's suggestion of 15...Be6!? deserves serious consideration too ) 16.Rc1 is extremely messy whether Black goes Qh4 *(*or first flicks in 16...e3!? . )]

[b) 13.Bd3 Be6 14.0-0 0-0 was debated in the last high-level test of this variation, Anand-Lautier, Belgrade 1997: 15.Nc2 Nxc2 *(*Lautier dislikes 15...Bxd5!? 16.exd5 in his notes, but this doesn't seem at all clear after Nxc2! 17.Bxc2 e4 : for example, 18.f3 axb5 19.fxe4 Bxb2 20.Rb1 Be5 and Black's dark-squared play compensates for the pawn that is set to go west ) 16.Bxc2 fxe4 17.bxa6 Rxa6 18.Bxe4 f5 19.Bd3 ( 19.Bc2!? may be a better attempt to bring the bishop to the a2-g8 diagonal ) 19...Rc6 saw Black's strong centre and bishops supply decent play for the pawn. ]

13...0-0 14.exf5

[I dare say this is critical. White might instead hold e4, but after 14.Bd3 Bb7 15.Nc4 Kh8! 16.f3 Bxd5 17.exd5 e4! Black obtained the initiative in Mong Lin Wang-Toro Solis de Ovando, correspondence 1994. ]

14...Bb7!?

[A novelty, although I know not whether this was preparation or a decent attempt to get Malisauskas out of preparation. Previously Black had preferred 14...Bxf5 and after 15.Bc4 Be4 ( 15...Qg5!? 16.0-0 Bh3 17.Ne3 Rab8 also deserves consideration ) 16.0-0 Rc8 17.Nc3 Bb7 18.Bd5 Bxd5 19.Nxd5 Rc5 20.Nc3 Rc6 21.Nd5 Rc5 the position was roughly level in P.Larsen-El Kher, Danish League 2002. ]

15.Bc4?!

[ It looks logical to maintain d5, but now Malisauskas quickly drifts into trouble. Instead 15.Nc7 Rc8 ( Rybka's more dynamic 15...Rb8!? 16.Nc2 Be4 is a decent alternative ) 16.Nc2 Nxf5 doesn't appear especially promising for White, but would have been a better try. ]

15...Rc8 16.f6!?

[ This thematic idea fails to equalize, but White would have been worse too after 16.Qd3 e4! 17.Qd2 Bxd5 18.Bxd5 Rc5 19.Bxe4 Re8 . ]

16...Bxf6 17.0-0?

[ One might well prefer not to play such an open position against Shirov in a rapidplay game, but White would still have been in the game had he preferred 17.Qd3 Bxd5 18.Bxd5 Rc5 19.Be4 Qxb6 20.0-0 . I quite like Black's centralised forces here, but h7 is going to drop off. ]

17...Rxc4! 18.Nxf6+

[ Easy to criticise, but White's long-term chances would hardly have been all that rosy after 18.Nxc4 Bxd5 . ]

18...Qxf6 19.Nxc4 Nf3+! Malisauskas must have missed this thunderbolt when he elected to castle. 20.Kh1

[ This makes little difference, but of course White's problem was that 20.gxf3 Bxf3 would have left him with a choice between losing his queen and being mated. Following 21.Qxf3 Qxf3 22.Nd2 White might have rook and knight for the queen, but after, say, Qf4 23.Nb3 Rb8 he would hardly have survived for long with his king so exposed. ]

20...Qf4 21.Qxf3

[ Relatively best in view of 21.g3 Qh6 , but White might already have resigned. ]

21...Bxf3 22.Nxd6 Bxg2+! Unsurprisingly Shirov finishes in the crispest manner.

Black has a number of interesting and very satisfactory responses, one of which we see here. In my view, Black must start with 6...c5! 6...d6! Quite right! A vigorous reaction in the centre is indicated. 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 Black is only too willing to sacrifice the incidental h pawn to increase his central pressure. 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 I think the main reason I don't like this line for White has to do with the pawn structure. When the smoke clears,. Black usually holds all the trumps in that area. It's almost as if White has no Plan B if the attack breaks down, he has nothing left to call on.
10...Bxf6 11.c3 0-0 12.Be2

12...Bg5N White's position is fragmented and he faces threats such as ...Qb6 so he's trying to keep his game alive with tactics. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Nf5!? White threatens both Nd6+ and Ne3-d5, and so virtually forces Black's reply. Maybe this choice is a shape of things to come, Black is doing well in the mainlines and so players are starting to look elsewhere as White.

[ In their book 'Dangerous Weapons: The Sicilian', John Emms and Richard Palliser actually suggest playing the move 6.Nde2 in the chapter 'Surprising the Sveshnikov'. ]

6...d5 According to Rogozenko "the next sequence of moves is more or less forced". 7.exd5 Bxf5 8.dxc6 bxc6 9.Qf3 Qd7 10.Bg5 e4 Black's "most ambitious" move, although Rogozenko thinks that

[ 10...Be7 "offers equal prospects". ]

11.Qd1!? Unusual, having refused the exchange of queens on move 9 (with reason) White returns to base to menace that same exchange! This bizarre move is not even mentioned by the Sveshnikov expert who mostly concentrates on the mainline

[ 11.Qe2 Be7 ]

11...Qc7!? A new move, but it certainly doesn't look like an improvement on the previous ones:

[ 11...Bd6! is logical, developing another piece 12.Bc4 ( 12.Bxf6 gxf6 is nothing for White, in fact I prefer the black bishops. ) 12...Qe7 13.Qd4 Soueid, T (1976)-Sprenger, J (2191)/Goch 1999, when Be5 looks nice for Black. ]

12.Bxf6 gxf6 13.Qd4 Attacking both e4 and f6. 13...Qe5 14.Qa4 Rc8 Black gets into a bit of trouble after this move, perhaps he should have considered

[ 14...Rb8!? 15.Qxc6+ Bd7 16.Qxe4 Rxb2 with active play for his bishops. ]

15.Ba6 White gets to develop with gain of time. 15...Rc7 16.Rd1 As the c6-pawn is pinned this threatens to play something to d5. 16...Bd6 17.Nd5 White tries to make the most of his temporary initiative. 17...0-0!? Black decides to sacrifice an exchange, rather than a pawn by

[ 17...Rd7 18.Qxc6 0-0 19.c3 and White can't castle immediately, but he has fair chances of consolidating his extra pawn. ]

18.Nxc7 Bxc7 19.Qxc6 e3 20.f3 Qxb2? This is a tactical miscalculation, which is not a good idea against Volokitin, who probably saw the winning route almost immediately. Black had several reasonable tries:

[ 20...Be6 (to stop Qd5) 21.Qb5 ( 21.c3 Rb8 ) 21...Qf4 22.Qe2 Rb8 23.c3 Qh4+ 24.Kf1 f5 followed by ...f4 to protect the massive e3-pawn, and whilst a computer would be happy with White's position, I'm not so sure I would fancy playing it! ]
[ 20...Bb6!? is also possible, when 21.Qd5 e2!? 22.Bxe2 Qe3 23.Rd2! ( 23.Rf1 Bxc2 24.Qd2 Qe5! 25.Qxc2 Ba5+ 26.Kf2 Bb6+ forces a draw by perpetual ) 23...Bxc2 24.Rxc2 Rd8 wins the white queen, and after 25.Qxd8+ Bxd8 White has a nominal material advantage but still has to do something with his king and get his king's rook into play. ]
21.Qxc7 Bxc2 22.Qg3+ Kh8 23.Qd6! Threatening Qxf8 mate. 23...Qc3+
[ 23...Kg7 24.0-0 Bxd1 25.Qxd1 and e2 is guarded when White's extra pieces will triumph. ]
24.Kf1 Rg8 25.Re1 Now Black has very little compensation for his rook. 25...Qd2 26.Qxf6+ Rg7 27.Be2 The only move, but good enough.

[Korneev has also dabbled in this of late, but if White cannot prove any advantage with 13.g3 , I suspect that the current fashion for 10 Bxf6 Bxf6 11 c4 may soon start coming to an end. ]

13...Be6

[Krasenkow recently switched from our main text to 13...Be7 , but I'm not entirely sure why. That said, 14.Rd1 ( 14.a3 bxa3 15.Qxa3 0-0 16.Bd3 Rb8 17.0-0 Be6 was fine for Black in Ponomariov-Radjabov, Russian Team Championship 2008 ) 14...0-0!? 15.c5!? *(*critical, whereas the slower 15.Be2 Be6 16.0-0 Bg5 is clearly comfortable for Black White lacks an especially good plan here ) 15...dxc5! 16.Nf6+ Bxf6 17.Rxd8 Rxd8 18.Bc4 Nd4 19.Nxd4 Rxd4 20.Bd5 Rb8 21.0-0 c4 gave him full compensation for the queen in A.Filippov-M. Krasenkow, Mumbai 2008, although White eventually triumphed after a long and dramatic fight. ]

[For once I suspect that Black may do well, though, to avoid 13...Bg5 , since 14.h4! Bh6 15.g4 f6 16.g5!? fxg5 17.Qh5+ Kf8 18.Bh3 gives White decent play for his pawn. ]

14.Rd1 a4!

[A bold novelty. Black is happy to allow his kingside to be broken up so long as he can obtain some counterplay on the queenside. Krasenkow's earlier choice was the solid 14...Bxd5 15.Rxd5 *(*I wonder if Krasenkow has been put off this line by 15.cxd5!? when Nb8 16.Bb5+ Nd7 17.Bc6 leads to a likely edge for White, and neither does 15... 15...b3! The talented, young Greek is certainly in a combative mood! Moreover, the forcing text gives Black sufficient counterplay and, indeed, the game soon fizzles out to a draw. 16.axb3 Rb8 17.Nxf6+

[The alternative was to delay this, but after 17.bxa4 Rxb2 18.Qc3 Qa5 19.Qxa5 Nxa5 20.Ncb4!? 0-0 Black would still have gained good counterplay on the queenside, such as with 21.Nd3 Rc2 22.Nxf6+ gxf6 23.Nb4 Rb2 24.Nd5 Kg7

17...gxf6 18.b4!?

[ Bringing the knight to b5 is a reasonable try, although ultimately it fails to trouble Papadopoulos. However, Black would also have been fine after 18.bxa4 Rxb2 19.Qc3 Qa5 : for example, 20.Qxa5 Nxa5 21.Kd2 Kd7 22.Rb1 Rhb8 23.Rxb2 Rxb2 with sufficient queenside play to maintain the balance. ]

18...Nxb4 19.Na3 Nc6 20.Nb5 The point of Movsesian's play, but once again Black can pose some problems by bringing his queen to a5. 20...Qa5+ 21.Rd2 Ke7 22.Qe3

[ White might also attack d6, but after 22.Qd3 Nd4! 23.Nxd4 exd4 24.Qxd4 Qc5 he has only succeeded in transposing to the game. ]

22...Nd4! A powerful secondary pawn sacrifice. Once again the resulting open queenside lines will give Black enough compensation. 23.Nxd4 exd4 24.Qxd4 Qc5 25.Qxc5

[ White wouldn't have had anything better after 25.Qc3 Rb3 26.Qc1 Rg8! 27.g3 Bh3 than to begin to repeat with 28.Bf1 Be6 , but it may surprise some subscribers that Movsesian didn't try ]

[ 25.Qxc5 dxc5 26.0-0 . However, after Rb4 27.Rc1 Rhb8 28.Rcc2 f5 29.f3 ( 29.e5?! f4 forces White on to the defensive: 30.Bd3? a3 being one to avoid ) 29...fxe4 30.fxe4 Kf6 and 31...Ke5 it's clear that Black cannot be worse. ]

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c4 In the past this variation was considered to limit White's possibilities and lead to equal positions. But this is only partially true and lately 11.c4 has become really popular. There are two explanations for this. First of all White usually achieves very safe types of positions here, where Black has practically no counterplay. Such a strategy is perfect for many White players when they choose a system against the Sveshnikov Sicilian, especially since in the main theoretical lines Black feels comfortable. The second point is that opposed to the old assessment of 11.c4, in the positions arising White does have active possibilities and Black can easily end up in trouble. In fact, Black must take this variation very seriously and play accurately. I chose the present game in order to show some of my views on this variation. 11...b4 12.Nc2 a5 Although in many cases it might make little difference, in my opinion this advance is more precise than 12... Rb8. Earlier it was considered that the rook on b8 works best against White's plan with b3 followed by a3, but the last 1-2 years showed that White's activity on the queenside is hardly dangerous for Black anyway, therefore it is not yet clear where Black's rook is better placed, on b8 or a8. A few factors that speak in favour of leaving the rook on a8 are: the rook can come directly to c6 later, attacking the pawn on c4, and one of the very few active possibilities for Black is connected with the advance of the a-pawn, especially after White's b3. In that case the rook is better off on the a-file. Further: from a8 the rook can protect the d6-pawn from a6, if necessary. Finally, Black can sometimes use the square on b8 for the knight, in order to transfer it via a6 to c5.

[ The following example shows Black's possible problems in this variation: 12...Rb8 13.b3 (preventing the advance ... b4-b3) 0-0 14.g3 Be7 ( After 14...g6 White must eliminate the dark-squared bishop 15.Nxf6+! Qxf6 16.Bg2 a5 17.0-0 Bb7 18.Qd2 and this position is in White's favour, who can combine pressure on d6 with the plan f2-f4, trying to use the weaknesses created after 14...g6. Notice that White can even consider tripling heavy pieces on the d-file, for instance with the help of Rfe1-e3-d3 and Rad1. Black has difficulties protecting d6 and also to create any activity at all*.; 14...Bg5 15.Bg2 a5 16.0-0* leads to the example given in the note 14...Rb8 ) 15.Bg2 Be6 16.0-0 Qd7 17.Qd3 a5 18.Rad1 Rfd8 19.f4 White has easy play, while Black must wait passively. f6 20.Kh1 Qa7 21.h4 Bf8 22.f5 Bf7 23.g4 Ne7 24.Nde3 The side with a space advantage must avoid the exchange of pieces. Kh8 25.g5 Nc8 26.Ng4 White has a large advantage, Korneev, O (2565)-Konings, F (2246)/Maastricht 2007 ]

13.g3 Nowadays regarded as the most optimal continuation. With the bishop on g2 the f2-f4 advance becomes a very important active option for White in the upcoming strategical battle. 13...Bg5

[ In case of 13...0-0 apart from 14.Bg2, Black must also reckon with 14.h4. ]

14.Bg2 Modest, but safe and strong. The slightly more active alternative 14.h4 followed by Bh3 is more committal.

[ 14.h4 Bh6 15.Bh3

A) Another possibility is 15...Be6 16.Kf1 0-0 17.Kg2 This position should be close to equal, but still Black must know what to do. For instance: Ne7 ( 17...Rb8 18.b3 transposes to the game Morozevich-Leko, San Luis 2005, where the Hungarian GM found the optimal plan starting with Rb7! 19.Bf5 Kh8 20.Qd3 Nb8! transferring the knight to c5, with approximate equality. ) 18.Nxe7+ Qxe7 19.Qd3 Rad8 20.b3 Qb7 21.Bxe6 fxe6 22.Rad1 Qb6 23.Rhf1 Rd7 24.Qe2 Rdf7 25.Rd3 The position looks equal, but White has more ideas due to the fact that Black's bishop is basically out of play. 14...0-0

[ Often in practice Black plays 14...Rb8 in order to provoke 15.b3 but it is not clear if this is such a great achievement, since with the rook on b8 instead of a8 Black cannot take advantage of it. 19...Rfd8 Black has exchanged the potentially weak dark-squared bishop and now he has little to fear: his two remaining light pieces can control the d5-square. Besides, the knight can even try to be transferred to d4 or even c5 later. Nevertheless even after succeeding with the favourable exchanges of the minor pieces Black remains with the weak pawn on d6, which always requires protection. For his part White didn't play b2-b3 and therefore Black cannot organize counterplay on the a-file. The position is about equal. 20.Rd2 Qc7 21.h4

The pawn formation that arises offers White some possibilities to fight for some advantage in relatively simple and safe positions. In order to keep the balance Black must know precisely what he is doing and what pieces he should try to exchange.
[In the final position perhaps Black could try to use White's 25.f5 and still continue, although there is no way to organize a clear plan. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5!? This is an interesting idea for Black. With the inclusion of ...h6 and Bh4 White is missing some options in the Main Line of the Poisoned Pawn. However White now has an extra option which would not work with the bishop on g5. 9.Nd5 I considered this move as an improvement after having lost a rapid game to Valerij Popov in 2006. 9...Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c4 b4 This came as somewhat of a surprise to me. Black now seriously weakens the light squares, which was not at all necessary. 12.Nc2 a5 13.Be2 Adding pressure against the weak d6-pawn and creating the threat of Bxb5.

[ 13.g3 when White loses a piece. ]

13...0-0 14.Bg4 Be6 15.Qf3 This bishop was not doing very much on f2 any longer and after the weakening move ...g6 it is natural to come back with the bishop.

24.f3 White adds pressure against the weak d6-pawn in order to force a passive defence from Black. 24...Rfc8!? Black decides to defend actively by means of counter-attack. Now the d6-pawn should not be taken in view of ...Qe3+ after exchanging rooks. 25.Qb3 Putting the king in safety and once again preparing Rxd6. 25...Qb5+ Once again Black is using her queen to create counter-threats instead of defending passively by ...Be7. 26.Rd3 This moves forces the queen back again, but the rook leaves the d-file making it possible for Black to defend d6. 26...Rc4 27.Rhd1 White now stops Black from creating counterplay with ...b4 and at the same time reduces the power of the bishop on f6. 27...Rac8 Black tries to place her pieces as actively as possible while waiting for White to force matters. Since Black is now forced into a passive defence, White is in no hurry but can simply improve his pieces before forcing any action. 28.Kf2 Qb6+ 29.Kf1 Rc1 This move creates further weakness around Black's king, but it was hard to find sensible waiting moves for Black. 30.Nd5 White prepares to play Rfd1 without allowing ..Qf2. In addition White now eyes the h5-pawn and a bishop sacrifice might soon become possible. 30...Qd8 In time trouble Black does not want to risk anything, but this leads to an even more passive defence and gives White an easy game. 31.Rxc1

33.g3! Now it's the right time to push forward for White. Black's pieces are uncoordinated and an attack against the king is very logical. 33...g5 34.h5 g4 Black tries to get the queen into the game in order to defend against White's attack. 35.fxg4 Bg5

38...Qa7 39.a4! White suddenly switches sides of the board when all Black's pieces are stuck to the defence of the king. Black's queenside pawns are about to fall and there is not much she can do about it.

[ 39.Rf5± White has more than enough pawns for the sacrificed piece. In addition to Black's exposed king White has good winning chances, but Black is still fighting. Stronger is h6 40.Rxg5+ hxg5+- which is still winning for White, but does not look that clear to a human eye. After the correct 41.Qe3! ]

39...Kg7 Once again the queen gets active and this seems like the best practical chance. 40.Qf3?! A natural safety move, but a slight inaccuracy. 40...Rc2 41.Qf5 h6 42.Nf6 Bxf6 43.Qxf6+! White has a beautiful Nd5 and firm control on the light squares, so his position looks great at first sight. On the other hand, the knight doesn't create any serious threat on d5 and Black has the bishop pair. Eljanov shows very instructively how to exploit this long-term advantage:
20...f5! Naturally, Black wants to open the game for the bishops.
[ 20...Bd8= is the solid alternative, but Eljanov's move is more active. ]
21.exf5

23.Rfd1 Bc2! 24.Re1 Bb3 The bishop is a bit annoying on b3 as Black creates the threat of Rxb5. 25.Ne3
[ 25.Rxa5? Bd2-+ is a nice tactical point. ]
25...a4! This doesn't create any threat, but the pawn is simply safer on a4. 26.Bxa4? White couldn't hold the tension, but this simplification leads to a worse endgame for him.
[ Something like 26.Ra3 or ]
[ 26.h3 would have been better, keeping the tension and waiting for a more adequate moment to play Bxa4. ]
26...Bxa4 27.Rxa4 Rxb2 A similar case as the game Carlsen-Karjakin: Despite the knight x bishop ending, Black is more active, and in this particular case the bishop is very strong. 28.f3? This seems a natural way of relieving the pressure on f2, but Eljanov's next move was very strong.
[ According to the engine, White's best defense was 28.Nd1 but after Rc2∓ his position is obviously unpleasant. ( Or 28...Rb1 29.Rf1∓ )]

Going into the last round, Granda Zuniga, Pelletier and I shared first place, with me having the worst tie-break. So, obviously, only a win could give me chances for an overall victory in the tournament. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5

[ 14...Be6 15.a4 bxa4 16.Ndb4 Ne7 17.Bxa6 Black resigned. At the end of dramatic last round none of my direct competitors had achieved a win, so I managed to occupy clear first place! Bb3? 18.Qe2 Qc7 19.Bd3 Rbd8 20.Na3 would still require a lot of work. d5 21.exd5 Nxd5 22.Nxd5 Rxd5 23.Nc2 Rfd8 would be a quicker way to finish. 24.Nb4? R5d7!+- 25.Qh5 was also winning. Black will lose at least an exchange. Bh6 26.Bb5± After the game my opponent told me that he had overlooked this simple defensive move. Rd2 was an option with a position similar to that in the previous comment. 27.Bxa4 Bxa4 28.Rxa4 Rxb2 29.Qf3 g6 30.Nc6 Rf8 is unsatisfactory for Black, since the Bd6 doesn't have a good square, and the Pa7 is a target. 31.h4 Qd6 32.Rd1 Qe6 33.Nb4 e4 and White keeps a stable pressure. 34.Qg3 e3 35.fxe3 Bxe3+ 36.Kh1 Qb3 37.Raa1 Bf2 38.Qh3 Qc4 39.Nd3 Rc2 40.Nxf2 Rxf2 41.Rd4 Qe2 42.Qg3= 1/2-1/2 Kasparov,G (2715)-Andersson,U (2575)/Belgrade 1985/MCL (36). [Richard Palliser]

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c4 b4 The main move by far and Sveshnikov players may wish to pause at this moment and notice the result of this game - yes, Black can win against this solid line! However, the text is not the only option, with alternatives including:

[a) Despite Moiseenko's one-time use of 11...Ne7!? 12.Nxf6+ gxf6 13.cxb5 0-0 this variation is still to really take off. Perhaps there is a route to a white advantage, but I still feel this is a decent surprise try for Black. In the only 2012 test I could find, 14.Bc4!? (new for us please see the notes to both Kovchan-Moiseenko, Kiev 2011, and Hegarty-Dargan, Sheffield 2011, for thorough coverage of the alternatives) f5 15.exf5 Bxf5 16.0-0 d5 (Black dominates the centre and White will take some time to recycle his knight from the rim, but there may not be quite enough compensation) 17.Bb3 Kh8 *(*the engines suggest 17...Qb6!? 18.Re1

Be4 , but after 19.Nb1! White is better ) 18.Re1 Qb8 19.Qe2 e4 20.Rad1 Qe5 21.Qd2 Be6 22.Qd4 didn't give Black quite enough for his pawn in Vuilleumier-White, Brighton 2012. ]

[ b) Moiseenko has also dabbled in 11...Nd4!? , a move which attracted the attention of subscriber Daniel Sullivan. After 12.cxb5 Daniel wondered about

A) the French IM Maxime Aguettaz prefers 12...Be6 and in Lintchevski-Aguettaz, Pardubice 2011, 13.Nxf6+ Qxf6 14.Nc2 ( 14.bxa6 0-0 15.Nb5 d5! looks like good compensation ) 14...0-0 15.Nxd4 exd4 16.Bd3 *(*not what White want to do I dare say, but after 16.bxa6 d5 17.Qf3 Qe7 Black's initiative is not to be underestimated ) 16...axb5 17.0-0 Rxa2 18.Rxa2 Bxa2 19.Bxb5 Rb8 soon fizzled out to an early draw;

B) 12...Bb7!? 13.Bc4 ( 13.bxa6 Bxd5 14.exd5 Qa5+ 15.Qd2 Qxd5 regains one of the pawns, as shown by Daniel's analysis ) 13...axb5 14.Bxb5+ Kf8 15.Bc4 *(*there's nothing better with ...Rxa3 threatened and 15.Nxf6?! gxf6 16.Bd3 f5 pretty dangerous for White ) 15...Qa5+ 16.Qd2 Bd8 17.Qxa5 Bxa5+ 18.Kd1 , which reaches quite a critical position. Moreover, it occurred in Nisipeanu-A. Muzychuk, Wijk aan Zee 2010, where f5 ( 18...Rb8!? 19.b3 f5 is Daniel's preference like him I suspect that objectively there may be a precise route to a white plus, beginning with 20.f3 , but some quick analysis shows that White can easily lose control one important point is that after Nc2 Black can often allow a trade on d4, helping to open the position for his bishops ) 19.f3 g6 20.Nb5 Nxb5 21.Bxb5 Kg7 22.Ke2 Rhf8 gave Black reasonable chances to hold (in the game an opposite-coloured bishop scenario soon arose). ]

12.Nc2 0-0

[ The usual choice these days, but there are many routes to the game position, including 12...Rb8 13.b3 0-0 14.g3 Be6 15.h4 . ]

13.h4!? Nepomniachtchi's move and one with which Caruana enjoyed some success earlier this year.

[ White often, of course, prefers 13.g3 Bg5 14.Bg2 a5 15.0-0 and now Be6 is quite topical, being played in Anand-Gelfand and also Salgado Lopez-Tregubov, Forni di Sopra 2012. The Spanish Grandmaster opted for 16.b3!? ( 16.Qd3 was Anand's choice, as we saw back in May,; and White can also go 16.Nce3 Ne7 17.Qd3 - see Korneev-Nataf, Ourense 2007, in the Archive with Dorian Rogozenko's instructive notes ) 16...Qb8 17.Nde3 , leaving the c2-knight to contest the queenside should that flank open up. I find it hard to believe that Black faces any real problems here and after the solid Rd8 ( 17...a4!? 18.Qd3 g6 looks quite sensible too ) 18.Nf5 g6 19.h4 Bf6 20.Nfe3 h5 21.Kh2 Bg7 22.Bh3 Qa7 chances were about equal, although Black soon got into trouble by hurrying to force exchanges with ...Nd4. ]

13...Be6 14.g3

[ The b-pawn remains taboo: 14.Ncxb4? Nxb4 15.Nxb4 Qb6 16.Qd2 Rab8 sees Black regaining his pawn with promising activity. ]

14...Rb8 15.b3 a5 A useful move, freeing the knight and creating the possibility of a timely ...a4, but the text is by no means obligatory:

[a) 15...Be7 16.Bg2!? Rb7 17.0-0 was Caruana-Tregubov, Russian Team Championship 2012, and now I still can't see too much wrong with the solid a5!? 18.Qd3 Bxd5 19.cxd5 Nb8 . ]

[b) 15...g6!? 16.Nxf6+ *(*far from essential, but 16.Bg2 Bxd5! is slightly awkward for White no matter how he recaptures: for example, 17.cxd5 Nd4 18.Nxd4 exd4 19.Rc1 Rc8 and Black will invade on c3 with at least comfortable equality ) 16...Qxf6 17.Bg2 Rfd8 18.0-0 a5 19.Qe2 Qe7 20.Rad1 a4 was, if anything, slightly better for Black in Balogh-Moiseenko, Ningbo 2011, as we've also noted before. ]

16.Rc1 A mysterious rook move. White gets the rook away from any potential tricks on the long diagonal, but it's still hard to believe that he needs to hurry with this move. 16...g6!?

[Krasenkow reveals that he is after the full point. Instead 16...Be7 17.Qd3 Qd7 18.Rd1 Bd8! 19.Bg2 Qa7 was very solid for Black, who drew comfortably but never really had any winning chances in Areshchenko-Jakovenko, Russian Team Championship 2008 - see the Archive. ]

[Neither I suspect did Krasenkow want to simplify with 16...a4!? 17.Bg2 Bxd5 18.Qxd5 Qb6 19.0-0 Ra8 , although this seems pretty comfortable for Black too. ]

17.Bg2

[ 17.h5?! Bg5 would only help Black's bishop reach its favourite diagonal, of course, ]

[while 17.Nxf6+ Qxf6 18.Bg2 might be met by Rbc8!? , indirectly defending the d-pawn, after which ...Qe7 and ...f5 might well follow. ]

17...Bg7 18.0-0 Bh6 Black unhurriedly continues to improve his bishop and question just why White shifted his rook to c1. 19.Nde3

[White's knights aren't too happy after this and while he shouldn't be worse perhaps this wasn't best. Going 19.Ra1!? would have required a large slice of humble pie, but after, say, f5 20.exf5 gxf5 21.Qh5 Bg7 22.Rad1 a typical Sveshnikov middlegame arises where White doesn't seem too badly placed. ]

19...Qb6 20.Qd3 Rbd8! A passive square for the rook it is true, but ...a4 wasn't going to particularly help Black. After it b4 may become weak and an open a-file can but help any aspirations White may have of hoovering. Instead Krasenkow continues to deploy his pieces harmoniously, with the king's rook staying on f8 to support the classical Sveshnikov break-out. 21.Rcd1 Ne7 22.Kh2

[White seems slightly devoid of a good plan, but to be fair finding one is not so easy. Perhaps 22.a3!? was possible, although one can see why Tirard may not have been sure about bxa3 23.Nxa3 Bxe3 24.Qxe3 Qxe3 25.fxe3 . Black can even go a4!? here, but with d6 so weak it seems that White should be OK after 26.bxa4 Ra8 27.Nb5 . ]

22...Kh8 Now all the useful moves have been played and ...f5 will follow. Meanwhile just what has White achieved after the past few moves, bar maintain a solid set-up?

23.Qe2 f5 24.exf5 gxf5 25.Nd5

[White is at least fairly well placed to respond to the opening of the centre and returning the knight to d5 looks like the right call. Sometimes one can hold up the black pawns with 25.f4 , but this looks a bit suspect with h4 already in and after exf4 26.gxf4 Bg7 the white king position is surely the more draughty. ]

25...Bxd5! A big decision, but from a practical perspective at least a good one. Krasenkow heads for an opposite-coloured bishop scenario and goes straight for the throat on the kingside. 26.Bxd5 f4 27.Be4 White's bishop is quite strong here and my engines seem to slightly favour his chances, but just what is his plan? Moreover, his king position remains a cause for concern and his knight is going to take some time to bring round into the game. 27...Rf6 28.Rd3

[Initially the computer likes 28.g4 , but then gradually appreciates that f3! 29.Bxf3 Rdf8 30.Ne1 Ng6 would not make for happy viewing for the white monarch. ]

28...Rg8 29.Ne1 Finally the knight is redirected, but Black too is able to redeploy his pieces. White's defence of g3 is quite solid, but there can be little doubt that he is on the back foot and facing quite a grim defensive task. 29...Qb8! 30.Nf3 Qc8 31.Ng1?

[Rather defensive and it seems that 31.Nd2 would have been a better try. Black has several possibilities here, but after Rgf8 ( 31...Nf5?! 32.Bxf5 Qxf5 33.Kg2 sets up a light-square blockade ) 32.Kg2 Qe6 33.Rf3 the defence is holding for the time being, and Bd5 followed by Ne4 may reduce the pressure. ]

31...Nf5! 32.Qh5?

[White finally goes active, but only lands up getting into a pickle. After 32.Bxf5 Qxf5 33.Re1 Re6! there's not time to set up a blockade, ]

[but the calm 32.Qd1! followed by Ne2 would have offered certain defensive chances. ]

32...Qf8 Menacing a nasty blow with the knight on g3 and suddenly Tirard finds himself rather helpless. 33.Kh3 So that g3 won't fall to the black f-pawn with check, but if this is the best White can do... 33...Ng7! Krasenkow prosecutes his huge initiative with precision. 34.Qd1 fxg3 35.Rxg3 A sub-optimal recapture to have to make, of course, but there was nothing else. 35...Bf4 36.Rg4 h5! The end draws near. 37.Rg6 Rxg6 38.Bxg6 Qc8+ 39.Kg2 Qe6 White's counter pressure against h5 prevents him from losing a piece immediately, but he can hardly hope to survive down the open g-file for long. 40.Be4 Ne8+ 41.Kh1 Rg4 42.Re1 Nf6 Adding yet more weight to the attack. 43.Qd3 Nxe4 44.Rxe4?

[A slip, but 44.Qxe4 Rxh4+ 45.Kg2 Rg4+ 46.Kh1 Bd2 also would have quickly forced resignation. ]

44...Rxh4+ 45.Kg2 Qg4+

[After 45...Qg4+ 46.Kf1 Rh1 there's nothing to be done about the pin. A real Sveshnikov masterclass from Krasenkow. ]

[ 44.-- The following day, 18 January, was free, and in the A group the organisers arranged a blitz tournament (only Shirov, who had to see a dentist, was replaced by the local master Bosboom). Many were expecting Anand to win, but I started with 7 out of 7, and after a draw with Kramnik I again won - 81/2 out of 9! And although I then contrived to lose with White to Bosboom, in the end I scored 101/2 out of 13 and took first place by a margin of one and a half points ahead of Anand and Ivanchuk, whom I beat in our individual games (from the year 2000, for some reason, such blitz tournaments were no longer held). --- After such a powerful stimulus I felt very much on form. In the third round I beat Yermolinsky with Black, after castling queenside in the Grünfeld - a very rare occurrence (cf. Game No.67, note to White's 10th move), and I caught the leader - Anand. Topalov and Kramnik were half a point behind. ]

[With this move White aims to create a bind on the queenside and starts a simple positional battle without tons of theory. Sidestepping the main paths also has its price and Black players shouldn't be worried facing this move. In the Sveshnikov structures with pawns on a6 and b5 a great deal of White's play is based on challenging the queenside which isn't possible in this variation as Black can't play ...b7-b5 at all. Secondly, the b4-square has been weakened and as we will see it serves as a nice outpost for the black knight. In a couple of games White also voluntarily retreated the knight with 7.Na3 (Robert Ris) anticipating Black's queenside expansion. Black obtains a good game after Be7 8.Bg5 Bg4!? ( 8...Nxe4?! is less precise, in view of 9.Nxe4 Bxg5 10.Nxd6+ Ke7 11.Nac4 With chances to play for an edge. ) 9.Qd2 ( 9.Be2 Bxe2 10.Qxe2 Nxe4!

This move was played by Alekhine already in 1945 but it has a bad reputation and is known to be good for White. Of course playing the Dragon a tempo down would be a decisive mistake, but with this setup Black is searching for new ideas and often waits with the short castling so as not to come under immediate attack. In recent times the variation has been taken up on the reportoire by several strong GM:s and some even play it regularly. I believe the variation is not at all that bad and even if it should be, it's a lot of work to crack the nut. 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 This move allows White some tactics, but the outcome is not unfavourable for Black. 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c3 White forces the black Knight to the edge with the idea of putting a knight on g3 later on to open up the h-file. 11...Bg5 12.Nc2 The knight is heading for g3, but now White loses control in the centre. 12...Ne7?! This move has the right idea but is a bit too slow. Danish Championship, Skorping (3.2) 14.04.2014

[Richard Palliser]

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 One of Black's best approaches, placing immediate pressure on the white centre and not blocking in the light-squared bishop with ...e6. 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 Now the position resembles, and might even have been dare I say, a rather feeble version of the Exchange Caro-Kann. Perhaps it's better to view the position as a reversed Exchange Queen's Gambit and to note that Black has already equalised. 5...e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5?! a6 8.Na3 A time-honoured regrouping, but it's no trouble for Black to maintain his bishop on the key diagonal. 8...b5 9.Nd5

[ 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 ]

9...Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c3 Bg5 12.Nc2 An admission that things have gone wrong. White's problem is that he can't use the e5-square and lacks counterplay, whereas Black has a very easy plan: the minority attack. 12...0-0 13.a4 bxa4 14.Rxa4 a5!? 15.Bc4 Rb8 By now the pawn needed defending. Black will advance ...b5-b4, but there's no need to hurry. First Aagaard makes sure that c3-c4 won't be a slightly problematic response. 16.b3 Kh8 17.Nce3 Finally Andersen has a plan, to sink his knight on to e5, so Aagaard reacts on the other flank. 17...g6

[ 17...Bxe3 18.Nxe3 Ne7 19.0-0 f5 ]

[ 18.h4 Bxh4 19.g3 Bg5 20.f4 exf4 21.gxf4 Bh4+ ]

18...f5 19.Qd3 Bh6! The right rook. At first it might look like Black has allowed a bit of pressure down the c-file, but his next will keep control while reminding us that only one player is under pressure on the queenside. 20.Rd1 Bd7 21.Ra2 Rb7

[ 21...Qh4 22.f3 ( 22.exf5 gxf5 23.Nc7 ) 22...Be6 ]

22.f3 Andersen has fought back well enough and now hopes to finally obtain some real threats after f4-f4. Unfortunately for him, even here White is worse as Black's queenside play is very fast. 22...Bg7!

[ 22...Be6 with an improved version of the reversed Slav pawn grab. ]

23.Nc2? h5 24.Nde3 f4 25.Nd5

[ while 25.Nf1 is recommended in Lakdawala's recent 'Move by Move' work on the Colle. One idea is Rf6 ]

25...g5 Now d4 is vulnerable and Black is all set to invade via c1 or c2. 26.Na3 g4! Swapping off a key defender and preparing to invade with the major pieces. 27.Bb5

[ 27.Nb5 keeps everything covered. or Be8 28.Kh1 Bh6 29.Qe2 with a rather loose version of a Panov for White An independent, fairly critical approach is Rg7 , ]

27...Rg8 28.Kh1

[ 28.Nc4 ]

28...Bf8 29.Qf1 Qh4
[ 29...Qg5 ]
30.Ba4
[ 30.fxg4 hxg4 ( 30...Ne7 ) 31.g3 ]
30...gxf3 The same structure as in our last note. Note, though, how Aagaard doesn't rush to exchange the queens by retaining them, he can increase the pressure against d4, f4, and even the white king. 31.gxf3 Bh3! 32.Qf2? Bg2+ Suddenly ...Rd3 is threatened, as well as ...e4-e3. 33.Qxg2 Rxg2 34.Rxg2 Ne7 35.Nxe7 Rxe7! Another move which I rather like, sensibly keeping the white queen out of g6.
[ Aagaard is happy to develop his knights before his bishops, but he might have considered 35...Qxe7 to prevent Bd3 when 36.Nc4 ]
36.Nc4
[ 36.Rxd6 Rg7 and Black will look to the classic minority attack. ]
36...Rg7 37.Rxg7 Kxg7! 38.Rf1
[ 38.Kg2 d5 39.Rxd5 ( 39.exd5 e4 ) 39...Qe1 ]
38...Qh3! was one point behind Black's last. Aagaard has played the whole game in rather a textbook manner and now converts while maintaining control. It was possible to be more forcing, but to go 39.Nd2 Be7 40.Bb5 one would have to spot in advance 40...Qc8 41.Bc4 Qc5 42.Re1 Bh4 43.Re2! Qa3? 44.Kg2 Qc1 45.Bd5
[ Not strictly necessary, but even 45.b4 wouldn't have been overly challenging: for example, a4 ]
45...Qxc3?
[ 45...Qd1 46.Bc4 Be1 Black had the more comfortable side of equality, Borsuk-K. Berg, Cappelle-la-Grande 2014. ]
46.Nc4 forces perpetual check. I suspect that 46...Be7 might have been a stouter defence. White hopes to escape into a pawn-down ending with some chances to draw, such as occurs after 47.Ra2 h4 48.Nd2
[ 48.Rf2 Qxb3?! 49.Nxe5 Qb6 ]
48...Bd8 49.Bc4 Bb6 50.Bf1
[ Amazingly this was a novelty. Some other poor soul had played as ineptly as white before. Of course, one might preface . ..b5 with 50.Be2 , but there's no need to. Andersen is a creative and talented young player, but sometimes one can over experiment in the opening. Another recent game saw the more natural Be3 , although after 51.Nc4 Qxb3 52.Rxa5 Qc2 ]
50...Qe3 51.Kh3 Qf2 52.Bg2 Be3 53.Rxa5 Bxd2 . 54.Rb5 would be an unhurried approach I wonder if White simply missed Black's next or wrongly thought that the bishop would find itself offside. Correct was 54...Be1 55.Rb7+ Kf6 56.Rd7 Qc5 , although 57.Rd8! (the simplest) 57...Ke7 58.Rg8 still leaves Black in charge of proceedings. Carrying out the aforementioned idea, but it won't alleviate White's suffering. That would have occurred too after 58...Qg1 59.b4 Bxb4 60.Kxh4
[ 60.Rh8 Be1 another quite tempting option. ]
and 60...Qxh2+ 61.Kg4
[ 61.Bh3 Be1+ ]

61...Qg3+
[ 61...Qg3+!? 62.Kf5 Qxg8 63.Bf1 Qg7 , with good pressure against the hanging pawns. Rather weakening, but it's already hard to offer White particularly good advice: he is somewhat worse. After 64.Bc4?! Qf6+ 65.Kg4 Qg6+ Black would have been all set to increase the pressure with ...Na5-c4, but one might make a case for 66.Kh4!? , hoping to liquidate the queenside and cling on to a backwards pawn on c3. However, Black doesn't have to maintain b5, with Be1+ 67.Kh3 Qg3# ]

Game of the Month August [SOS-2, Chapter 10, p.78] The Sveshnikov is one of Black's most reliable (or should I say theoretical?) weapons against 1.e4. However, as Dimitri Reinderman wonders in SOS-2: wouldn't it be nice if it were possible to play a kind of Sveshnikov 'sideline' every now and then? His answer was the Haberditz Variation with 6...h6. In this line the queens are often exchanged at a fairly early stage, which lessens the effect of the weakness on d5, and certainly lessens the theoretical workload. Following Reinderman's article in SOS-2 the Haberditz Variation gained a certaint amount of followers and an update seems in order. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 h6 Rather than 6...d6 to protect square d6, Black rules out the pin on his knight. The obvious disadvantage is that White can check on d6. Let's see what happens then in the notes. The other main line is 7.Nd5 which is also Zherebukh's choice. Recently, 7.Be3 and, to a lesser extent, 7.f4 have also come to the fore. 7.Nd5
[After 7.Nd6+ Bxd6 8.Qxd6 Qe7 White has a choice. The 'old' theoretical recommendation (as Reinderman noted) was

A) 9.Qxe7+ Kxe7 10.b3 ( 10.Be3 d6 11.f3 Be6 12.0-0-0 is the line that Reinderman feared most. Scottish GM John Shaw has played Rac8 13.a3 a6 14.Kb1 Na5 15.g4 Nc4 16.Bxc4 Rxc4 when White had nothing in Hamdouchi-Shaw, Gibraltar 2005. See the SOS Files in SOS-4. ) 10...d6 11.Be2 Be6 12.0-0 and now in Holvason-Neff, Rakvere 2009, Black grasped the initiative with Nd4 13.Bd3 Rhc8 and after 14.Bb2 Rc7 15.f4 Rac8 16.fxe5 dxe5 17.Ba3+ as in the game, when Kd8 looks OK for Black.;

B) 9.Nb5 Rb8! as Reinderman explains in SOS-2 this move is responsible for turning the Haberditz into a more or less respectable line. After taking on d6 White would be much better. 10.Be3 ( 10.b3 see SOS-2. ) 10...Nxe4 11.Qxe7+ Kxe7 12.f3 ( 12.Nxa7 Nxa7 was agreed drawn in Chapman-Vl.Smirnov, Manly Sydney 2009. ) 12...a6! ( 12...Nf6? 13.Bc5+! ) 13.fxe4 axb5 14.Bxb5 d6 15.0-0-0 Be6 16.b3 f6 and the game Brandenburg-Reinderman, Dieren 2007, ended in a draw after a long fight. ]

[Not mentioned in SOS-2 is 7.f4!? after a6 8.Nd6+ Bxd6 9.Qxd6 Qe7 10.fxe5 ( 10.Qxe7+ ) 10...Nxe5 11.Qd4 d6 ( An improvement is 11...d5!? 12.Nxd5 Nxd5 13.Qxd5 0-0 with good compensation. ) 12.Bf4 Bg4 13.Bd3 0-0 14.0-0 Bd7!? 15.Be2 Rad8 16.Rad1 White was better in Magem Badals-Oms Fuentes, Pamplona 2006. The position resembles a 6.f4 Najdorf gone wrong for Black. ]

[Worthy of attention is 7.Be3 after d6 8.Nd5 Nxd5 9.exd5

A) Reinderman notes that Black loses a pawn after 9...Ne7!? 10.c3! but Nf5 ( 10...a6 11.Qa4+- ) 11.Bxa7 seems to promise Black dangerous compensation:

A1) 11...Bd7 12.a4 b6

A1a) 13.Bd3 g6 ( 13...Be7 ) 14.0-0 Bg7;

A1b) 13.b4 Be7 14.a5 bxa5 15.Rxa5 0-0 16.Qa1 Qc8 17.Na3 Qb7 favours Black slightly, Fier-Lucena, Dois Irmaos 2008.;

A2) 11...Be7 12.Bd3 0-0 13.0-0 Nh4! 14.a4 f5 this looks like typical Sveshnikov compensation to me. White is winning on the queenside, but he could easily lose on the kingside. 15.g3 Ng6 16.a5 e4 17.Be2 ( 17.Bb6 Qd7 18.Nc7 exd3 19.Nxa8 f4 20.Qh5 Ne5 21.Nc7 g6! works for Black. ) 17...f4 18.Re1 e3! 19.fxe3 fxg3 20.hxg3 Bh4! 21.gxh4 ( 21.Rf1 Bxg3 22.Rxf8+ Nxf8 and Black is at least no worse. ) 21...Qxh4 22.e4 ( 22.Rf1 Bh3 23.Rf3 Rxf3 24.Bxf3 Qg3+ 25.Kh1 Nh4-+ ) 22...Qg3+ 23.Kh1 Nh4 0-1 Salem-Miroshnichenko, Amman 2008.;

11...Bc6 This move and the subsequent positioning of the queen on d5 was already indicated by Reinderman as the correct way to achieve equal chances (following Vitolinsh-Lutikov, Soviet Union 1970).

29...bxc6 30.b6 White has a dangerous passed pawn. Black has more material and an attack against the king. The ending is very sharp and not so easy to calculate for human beings. 30...Rb2 31.b7 c5 32.Ba6 e3! 33.Ra8+ Ke7 34.g4□

After this spectacular win I reached 3 out of 4, but Ivanchuk kept pace, defeating Bareev with Black. Then I won with Black against Short, and Ivanchuk with White against Shirov, and with a score of 4 out 5 we were confidently leading after the first cycle. --- In the second half of the tournament the FIDE officials Macropulos and Iclicki arrived, as well as Makarov, the president of the Russian Chess Federation. 'FIDE - RCF - PCA' discussions began, as well as other problems, and these affected my play. --- In a sharp Sicilian duel with Shirov I was the exchange up by the 28th move, but in time-trouble by some kind of miracle I missed a win. Meanwhile, Ivanchuk drew with Kramnik and then with Short. And I, by beating Bareev, at last moved half a point ahead - 51/2 out of 7! In the eighth round the status quo was maintained, as a complicated King's Indian with Ivanchuk ended in a draw. Then in the ninth round I drew with Short, after failing to exploit his errors in a rook endgame, and in the final, tenth round - with Kramnik. As a result I was caught by Ivanchuk, who again defeated Bareev. --- From the press: 'In an interview before the start the world champion promised that in Novgorod we would see a "new Kasparov". At the concluding press conference he was asked how successful this transformation had been. On hearing this question, Short, who was sitting alongside, burst out laughing: "In my opinion, Garry was the same as he has always been." Apparently the champion also felt that the promise had not been completely fulfilled. "The work has begun", he said. "I was less nervous at the board. And I could have played better in the second half - in particular, I did not win two games where I stood very well".' --- Indeed, I felt the need for a drastic renewal, and in particular of my opening repertoire. However, with Makarychev I was unable to resolve this problem. Sergey, with his customary sensitivity, himself realised that a conflict had arisen and he wisely decided to give up his post of trainer. From November 1994 the 30-year-old grandmaster Yuri Dokhoian began working with me, and we began patiently developing a new preparation conception, which was to bear considerable fruit in the late 1990s.' 36...Kxd7 ChessCalisthenics 37.Qxf8+- 1-0

White doesn't seem to get too much nowadays with this variation. 1.e4 Fitzsimons, David 1...c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 'Fitzsimons,David: 'The notorious Sveshnikov variation is well-known for leading to this backward pawn structure, with a different piece-placement for White compared to the previous game. White's Knight on b5 exerts immediate pressure on the pawn, but it can be driven back to a3 and often takes a lot of time to manoeuvre to an effective square. However, if White can prevent Black from achieving the ... d6-d5 break, then he may have the time to relocate this Knight to c4 or e3. In the meantime, Black usually experiences no problems with the development of his pieces, and often aims for counterplay on the Queenside, or potentially on the Kingside, depending on how White reacts. This position is a fascinating battleground that has been played and analysed extensively in recent years." 7...a6 8.Na3 b5 'Fitzsimons,David: 'Black prevents White from immediately regrouping his Knight to c4."
[ 8...Be6!? (Fitzsimons,David) prioritising the development of Black's Queenside pieces, is also possible, but it is generally considered somewhat weaker than sidelining White's King's Knight. 9.Nc4 Rb8 ]

Fitzsimons, David: '1) Similarly to the previous game, White found it very difficult to place any direct pressure on the backward d6-pawn. Instead, the struggle revolved around the control of the d5-square. Optically, White's supported Knight on d5 looks very powerful, but he often finds it difficult to improve his position further. 2) Black's two Bishops compensated for White's control over d5. Both Bishops combined their forces to harass the White Knights on e3 and d5, so that White never felt fully in command of the position. 3) This game is a good illustration of how to play around White's outpost on d5. Black was able to drum up excellent counter chances on the Kingside, firstly by breaking with ... f7-f5, and secondly by clearing an outpost for his own Knight on e5 with the e5-e4 advance. This led to a very double-edged struggled in which both sides made errors, but it was ultimately White's King in the firing line, and he eventually succumbed to Black's threats. As we have seen so often already throughout this course, static weaknesses (such as weak pawns) need to be compensated for by dynamic play!"

[ Although White is struggling on a number of fronts to prove an advantage after this, it makes for more interesting viewing than 10.Nxe7 Qxe7 11.c4 , which is finally starting to lose its popularity, with good reason too. ]

10...Bxf6 11.c3 0-0
[ An important alternative is, of course, 11...Bg5 and then 12.Nc2 Rb8 ( another important line was debated in Smeets-Wang Yue, Wijk aan Zee 2009: 12...Ne7 13.h4 Bh6 14.a4 bxa4 15.Ncb4 0-0 16.Qxa4 Nxd5 17.Nxd5 a5 18.Bb5 Be6 19.Bc6 Rb8 20.b4 axb4 21.cxb4 Kh8 22.b5 Bxd5 23.Bxd5 Qb6 24.Bc6 Be3 saw the players follow a game I've covered before, namely Grischuk-Illescas, Dresden Olympiad 2008 evidently Smeets was happy with a draw for he now went in for one without delay: 25.fxe3 Qxe3+ 26.Kd1 Qd3+ 27.Ke1 Qe3+ 28.Kd1 1/2-1/2 ) 13.a4 bxa4 14.Ncb4 Nxb4 15.Nxb4 Bd7! (Black is correct to keep the a4-pawn at the expensive of its colleagues on a6 and d6) 16.Bxa6 Qa5 17.Qxd6 Rb6 18.Qd3 Be7 19.Nd5 Rxb2 20.0-0 Qc5 saw quite a well-mined line being tested in Lopez Martinez-Cmilyte, Gibraltar 2009. However, here too White failed to prove any advantage: 21.Rab1 *(*White's main move, but not his only approach 21.Rad1 can be found in the notes to Bacrot-Radjabov, Baku 2008 ) 21...Rxb1 22.Rxb1 0-0 23.Bb5 Bxb5 *(*the move everyone plays these days, although quite frankly I have no idea what's wrong with the older 23...Be8 ) 24.Rxb5 Qa7 25.Nxe7+ *(*White cashes in immediately he preferred 25.Qe3 Qd7 26.Ra5 Rb8 and only then 27.Nxe7+ Qxe7 28.g3 in Volokitin-Van Wely, Spanish Team Championship 2005, which can be found with Tony's notes in the Archive - at this point I feel that Qa3! 29.Rxe5 Ra8 30.Qd4 Qf8 , as indicated by John Cox, is Black's simplest method of forcing a draw ) 25...Qxe7 26.Ra5 Rd8 27.Qe2 Qa3 (it's obvious that Black has no problems whatsoever) 28.g3 Qxc3 29.Rxa4 h6 1/2-1/2. ]

12.Nc2 Bg5 13.h4!?

[ Here at ChessPublishing we've concentrated our efforts on the main line with 13.a4 , but Smerdon wants to test another critical line. ]

13...Bh6 14.g4 Bf4!

[ This pawn sacrifice is considered Black's main try, although as pointed out in 'Starting Out: Sveshnikov Sicilian' (now available as an ebook from Everyman Chess!), it's by no means clear that 14...f6!? is a bad alternative. ]

15.Qf3 Be6 16.Nxf4 Smerdon goes straight for the pawn. We should also examine:

[ a) 16.Bd3 Rb8 17.g5 a5 ( 17...b4!? is an ambitious idea White can pick up two pawns with 18.Ndxb4 Nxb4 19.Nxb4 Qb6 20.Bxa6 , but after f6 21.gxf6 Rxf6 Black is very strong on the dark squares and White's king a little uncomfortable ) 18.a3 Bxd5! 19.exd5 Ne7 20.Qe4 g6 21.Ne3 h5! saw Black instructively closing the kingside with a decent game in Volokitin-Pavlovic, Saint Vincent 2002. ]

[ b) 16.Rd1?! is critical, but after Bxd5 17.Rxd5 Qa5! 18.Rxd6 Rac8 (Cox) Black has more than enough pressure for the pawn. ]

16...exf4

[ Mikhalevski has no qualms about sacrificing the pawn for queenside counterplay and use of the e5-square. This is best, although I suspect that Black might also get away with 16...Qf6!? : for instance, 17.g5 Qxf4 18.Qxf4 exf4 19.Nd4 Nxd4 20.cxd4 f6 and Black has reasonable chances to hold a slightly worse endgame. ]

17.Qxf4 Rb8!?

[ A novelty, aiming to open the queenside as quickly as possible. Presumably both players had their thoughts on the previously-tried 17...Ne5 , after which 18.Ne3 *(*perhaps 18.g5!? was Smerdon's prepared improvement, aiming to provoke f6 when 19.Nd4 Bg4 20.Qe3 might give White control and the better prospects ) 18...b4 19.Be2 ( 19.cxb4 Qb8 20.a3 d5! sees Black whipping up a dangerous initiative ) 19...bxc3 20.bxc3 Qa5 21.0-0 Qxc3 saw Black regain the pawn with at least equality in Bierwisch-Siegmund, Obertsdorf 2003. ]

18.a3!

[ A standard method against Black's ...b4-break. Instead the machine wants to play 18.0-0-0?! , but very few humans would touch this with a bargepole. Indeed, after Ne5 ( 18...b4 19.c4 Ne5 20.Ne3 b3! is a good alternative ) 19.g5 Bxa2 20.h5 Bb3 Black is at least equal he will trade on c2, attack on the queenside and rely on his strong knight to outclass White's unmoving bishop. ]

18...a5

[ Natural, but perhaps not the most precise. Instead I wonder about 18...Ne5!? when White doesn't really want to move his f-pawn, but perhaps should as 19.Ne3 *(*and not 19.Be2?! Bxg4! - that queen really can be a tactical liability on f4 ) 19...a5 20.Be2 b4 21.axb4 axb4 gives Black an improved version of the game. ]

19.Be2 b4 20.axb4 axb4 21.Nd4! Much stronger than trading on b4 and letting Black's rook play. The knight is well placed on d4 and the onus is now certainly on Black to demonstrate that he has enough compensation. Whether he has quite enough objective compensation isn't totally clear, but in practice a draw is certainly the favourite, partly because White's advanced kingside pawns will remain a potential target for some time to come. 21...Ne5 22.Qg3 Bc4

[ A sensible decision from our 1 e4 e5 expert Black weakens some more squares in White's camp and keeps his knight active. However, this wasn't the only approach a decent alternative being 22...bxc3!? 23.bxc3 ( 23.f4?? loses to cxb2 24.Rb1 Qb6 ) 23...Qc8 24.f4 Nc4 , preparing to hop into d2 should White castle and also to activate Black's major pieces down the a- and b-files. ]

23.Bxc4 Nxc4 24.b3 Ra8 25.Ke2 The safest square for the king and now Mikhalevski must have been a little worried that White was in danger of consolidating.

25...Ne5 26.c4

[ The only logical approach. Otherwise 26.cxb4?! Qb6 27.Qc3 Rac8 28.Qd2 Rfe8 would have been rather fraught with danger for White, ]

[ who should also steer clear of 26.f4?! Nd7 , which only speeds Black's knight towards another good square. ]

26...Re8! Menacing the white king and introducing the threat of 27...Nxc4 (28 bxc4 Rxe4+ 29 Kd3 Rxa1 30 Rxa1 Rxd4+ 31 Kxd4 Qf6+ is a handy skewer to regain the sacrificed material). 27.Nf5 Ra3?!

[ White has got his knight to a good square and is set to improve his queen, so Black must act and Mikhalevski is up for the challenge. However, I'm not totally convinced by his active approach and prefer 27...g6! 28.Ne3 Nc6 , with the point that 29.Rxa8 Qxa8 30.Qxd6 Rxe4 gives Black the initiative for the pawn deficit. ]

28.Rxa3 bxa3 29.Qc3!

[ Smerdon introduces some tactics down the long diagonal. Also natural was 29.Ra1?! , but with d5! *(*and not 29...g6?! 30.Ne3 Qa8 31.Nd5 when White is close to consolidating ) 30.Rxa3 dxc4 31.bxc4 g6 Black would have opened the position with very serious counterplay against White's poorly co-ordinated forces. ]

29...g6 30.Ne3!

[White gives up on the long diagonal. He didn't have to, but after 30.Nh6+!? Kg7 31.g5 with the only move f6 Black should be OK not only must White keep an eye on the a-pawn, but he must also be on his guard down the e- and f-files. ]

30...d5!?

[This move doesn't totally convince, but I dare say that Mikhalevski had realized that he was drifting into danger and so blew open the position an eminently sensible strategy, especially as I suspect that time trouble had already reared its ugly head. Instead 30...Qd7 31.f3 Ra8 32.Nd5 would have seen White taking control ]

[and 30...a2!? 31.f3! (important prophylaxis against the idea of 31...Qf6) Qa8 32.Ra1 Qa7 33.Nd5 Rb8 would also have been somewhat better for White, albeit far from a trivial conversion. ]

31.Nxd5 Nxg4 32.f3 Ne5 33.Qc1

[A useful multipurpose move, but I suspect that the direct 33.b4! was even stronger at any rate I haven't discovered anything too convincing here for Black: a2 *(*or 33...Re6!? 34.b5 f5 35.exf5! gxf5 36.Kd1 a2 37.Kc2 and the a-pawn will soon be rounded up ) 34.Qb2 Nxc4 35.Nf6+ Kf8 36.Nxh7+ Kg8 37.Nf6+ Kf8 38.Qc3 Re6 39.Nh7+ Kg8 40.Qxc4 Kxh7 41.Qxa2 and while Black can continue to resist, White definitely has some chances to convert his two-pawn advantage despite his exposed king. ]

33...f5?!

[Another active thrust, but a move which was probably best kept in reserve with 33...Qd6 , simply guarding the key a-pawn. ]

34.Qg5?

[Smerdon must have misjudged the consequences of this, otherwise he would have kept the queens on and preferred 34.h5 , leaving Black suffering: for example, fxe4 *(*or 34...g5!? 35.Qxa3 fxe4 36.fxe4 Nc6 37.Kd3 and White is better, although anything might have happened here in a frantic time scramble ) 35.f4! Nf3 36.hxg6 Nd4+ 37.Ke3 Nf5+ 38.Kd2 hxg6 39.Qxa3 and White is a pawn up and now with arguably the safer king. ]

34...fxe4 35.fxe4 Qxg5! 36.hxg5 Rb8 Winning back the pawn on the queenside and completely equalizing. 37.Nf6+ Kf8 38.Rxh7 Rxb3 39.Nd7+??

[White needed to find either 39.Ra7 ]

[or 39.c5 a2 40.Ra7 Rb2+ 41.Ke3 when Rb3+ 42.Kf4 Nd3+ 43.Kg4 Ne5+ 44.Kf4 forces perpetual. ]

39...Kg8??

[Now it's a draw, but had Mikhalevski had more time and forgotten about all the pawns bar the most advanced, I'm sure he would have won with the standard trick 39...Nxd7 40.Rxd7 a2 41.Ra7 Rh3! . ]

16...Kh8 17.Nce3 g6 18.h4 Bxh4 19.g3 Bg5 20.f4 A highly committal move. 20. Ra2 is a much safer option although less ambitious. See the notes to Topalov-Leko SuperGM 2005 for more on 20.Ra2. 20...exf4 21.gxf4 Bh4+ 22.Kf1 White's results from this position have so far been less than impressive, and at least in practice the system seems easier to play for Black, with 2600 players losing to lower rated opposition. Topalov tried 22.Kd2 with the idea of running to the queenside. 22...f5 23.exf5 This move is a novelty.

[ 23.Ra2 fxe4 24.Rah2 g5 25.Ng2 Rb7 26.Nxh4 gxh4 27.Rxh4 Rg7 Rogozenko has stated that this position was "no problem for Black in Stangl, M-Kindermann, S/ Altensteig 1987". 23...Bxf5 24.Nxf5 Rxf5 25.Qg4 Bg5! Is it possible that White simply missed this move when playing his 23rd move? In any case Black the only other move for Black is 25...Rh5 but then White is doing ok as the Black pieces become uncoordinated. Now White must play very precisely because 25...Bg5! simultaneously prevents Qxg6 as well as creating threats against the White king. Of course at this point White would have preferred to have played Ke1-Kd2 'ala Topalov' because it turns out that his king on f1 is precariously placed. Nevertheless with correct play here White would not be worse!

[ 25...Rh5? 26.Ra2 justifies White's idea as the Black pieces are tied up on the kingside. ]

26.Kg2? A blunder but the correct idea was not easy to see.

[ 26.Bd3!! There are many moves that are better than 26.Kg2, but only this move leads to an acceptable position for White. Now the position becomes immensely complicated , although as is often the case the main lines enter a drawn endgame! Rxd5 27.Bxg6

26...Bxf4! Suddenly it is over for White. 27.Nxf4 Rg5 28.Nxg6+ Kg7 Clearly a catastrophe for Delchev, and a warning to White players that one should only enter this variation after a thorough home analysis. The novelty 23.exf5 was not bad and had White found 26.Bd3!! he is probably on the 'better' side of an equal position. It will be interesting to see if anybody finds some ideas (perhaps after 26.Bd3) that offer White chances to play for more.

[The old move. Both Bologan and Nakamura have, however, of late preferred the modern line, namely 11.c4 b4 12.Nc2 0-0 13.h4 a5 14.g3 Be6 , reaching a position we've already considered on a good few occasions. Following 15.Bg2

( 15.b3 a4 allowed Black quite easy play in Nakamura-Radjabov, Zug 2013, and after 16.Rb1 axb3 17.axb3 Bxd5 18.cxd5 Na5! 19.Bh3 Qb6 20.Qd2 Rfb8 21.0-0 Ra7 the Azeri's defences were extremely solid ) 15...Rc8 (by no means forced indeed, do see the Archive for a discussion of the many alternatives) 16.Nce3!? ( 16.0-0 Bxd5 17.cxd5 Nd4 18.Nxd4 exd4 19.Qd2 Qd7 20.Rac1 was preferred in Shirov-Baron, Gibraltar 2012, where Black might have tried Rxc1!? 21.Rxc1 Rc8 22.Rc6 d3! ) 16...Nd4 17.Qd3 g6 White tried to make positive use of the fact that his pawn was on h4 and king on e1 with 18.0-0-0!? in Bologan-Moiseenko, World Rapid Championship, Khanty-Mansiysk 2013. It's far from easy for Black to open lines on the queenside and yet it's hard to believe he can be doing too badly in this rather murky situation, although after Bg7 ( 18...b3 19.a3 Bg7 20.Kb1 is very similar, as in the earlier Gutierrez Olivares-Vega Gutierrez, Gran Canaria 2012 there Black held back his f-pawn and after Rc5!? 21.f4 exf4 22.gxf4 Nc2! 23.Nxc2 bxc2+ 24.Qxc2 Bxd5 25.Rxd5 Rxd5 26.exd5 Qb6 enjoyed a strong initiative for just the cost of a pawn ) 19.Kb1 f5 20.f4! b3 21.a3 Nc2 *(*perhaps Black should have tried the radical 21...h5!? ) 22.h5 exf4 23.gxf4 Nxe3 24.Qxe3 White had the initiative with ideas of e4-e5 very much on the agenda. ]

11...Bg5 12.Nc2 Ne7 13.h4!? I quite like inserting this useful move before White gets on with his queenside play. 13...Bh6 14.a4 bxa4 15.Ncb4 0-0 16.Rxa4!?

[A new move for us to consider. Quite possibly Szczepkowska was hoping for the forcing line 16.Qxa4 a5 17.Bb5 Nxd5 18.Nxd5 Be6 19.Bc6 Rb8 20.b4 axb4 21.cxb4 when Illescas's Kh8! 22.b5 Bxd5 23.Bxd5 Qb6! 24.Bc6 Be3! is the way for Black to equalise - see the notes to Grischuk-Illescas Cordoba, Dresden Olympiad 2008. ]

16...a5

[The natural move. I also wondered about 16...Nxd5 17.Nxd5 Rb8 , but after 18.b4 f5 19.exf5 Bxf5 20.Bc4! it seems that White may come out on top. ]

17.Bc4 Bb7 New and a more defensive move than Black would like to play. This position had been reached a few times before and there the second player had preferred:

[a) 17...Bd7 18.Nxe7+ Qxe7 19.Nd5 Qd8 20.Ra2 Kh8 looks very natural, holding the queenside together, preparing ...f5 and hoping to show up h4 as a weakness. After 21.Qe2 Rb8 ( 21...a4 22.g3 Rb8 is a solid alternative ) 22.b3 Be6 ( 22...Rc8 23.g3 f5?! is tempting, but allows White to reveal one advantage to having h4 in: 24.exf5 Bxf5? 25.g4 Be6 26.g5 ) 23.g3 Qd7! 24.Rxa5 f5 25.exf5 Bxf5 26.0-0 Bh3 27.Rd1 Bg4 28.Qc2 the position was rather unclear in Kotronias-Sulava, Gonfreville 2006. Should Black exchange on d1, White will have a firm grip on the light squares and that bishop isn't so happy on h6, but whether we can really talk of a white advantage isn't at all clear to me. ]

[b) 17...Nxd5 18.Bxd5 ( 18.Nxd5 Bd7 would transpose to variation 'a' ) 18...Bd7 19.Bxa8 Bxa4 20.Qxa4 axb4 21.Bd5 bxc3 and 1/2-1/2 was the thrill a minute course of Erturan-Secer, Ankara 2007. ]

18.Nxe7+ Qxe7 19.Nd5 Qd8 20.g3 Kh8 21.0-0 A logical sequence of moves from Nisipeanu and one which has given him an edge, since White's king is safe enough and Black a little low on counterplay. 21...f5?!

[ The thematic break, but here one which only allows White to increase further his light-square grip. As such I would prefer 21...g6 and after 22.h5 Bc6 23.Ra2 f5 Black will at least obtain some counterplay. ]

22.exf5 Rxf5 23.Bd3! Rf8 24.Be4 Nisipeanu is outplaying his lower-rated adversary. Black is now rather devoid of counterplay and White can look to press ahead on the queenside. 24...Bc6 25.Ra3 Bb5 26.Re1 Ra7!

[ Activating the rook and the best try. Instead 26...a4 27.Qc2 g6 28.c4 Rc8 29.Rc3 would have left White in control on the queenside and with ideas of seizing the initiative on the other flank with h4-h5. ]

27.b3! Not only fixing the pawn on a5, but preparing to prophylactically defend along the second rank. 27...Raf7 28.Ra2 a4 29.c4 It's time to push Black back. The position may not seem so bad for Szczepkowska, but will she have time to activate her bishop on h6 or reach the haven of an opposite-coloured bishop ending?

29...axb3 30.Qxb3 Bc6 31.Qb6 Qd7?

[ The machine may prefer 31...Qxb6?! 32.Nxb6 Bxe4 33.Rxe4 g6 , but Black would be tortured all day here with such a bishop. ]

[ However, the haven of an opposite bishop ending has saved many a Sveshnikov player and here 31...Bxd5! 32.Qxd8 Rxd8 33.Bxd5 Rfd7 was indicated. After 34.Rea1 g6 35.Kg2 White will press, perhaps by trading a rook and then invading along the seventh or eighth, but Black, while rather passive, would have remained solid and retained definite chances to split the point. ]

32.Nc3! Waving goodbye to an any opposite bishop scenario. 32...Bxe4 33.Nxe4 d5 Presumably the move Szczepkowska was relying on, but the weakness of e6 will cost her. 34.Nc5 Qg4 35.Qe6!?

[ There was also nothing much wrong with 35.Ne6 Qxc4 36.Nxf8 Qxa2 37.Nd7 , regaining the pawn with a very strong initiative. ]

35...Qf3?

[ 35...Qxc4 36.Qxf7 Qxc5 was the last try. ]

36.Qxd5 Qc3 37.Qxf7! Qxe1+ 38.Kg2 g6 Black can hold on for the time being, but only until the rook and/or knight join the attack. 39.Qd5 Bg7 40.Ne6

7 rounds into the Brazilian Championship, I was leading with 6/7, but had the IM Evandro Barbosa half a point behind me with 5,5/7, meaning I could take no rest and had to play every one of the remaning 4 games for the win. In this round, I was facing an old friend from the Brazilian Junior tournaments back in the 2000s, and I knew it would be a tough challenge, because he was playing very well. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5!? Instead of allowing Black to play the Sveshnikov Variation, I tried this move for the 1st time in my life. [ 23.Qg2 Qxg2+ White gets full control of the dark squares for now, but faces a problem with the K on e1. Also, it would be better to have the P on f3, diminishing the power of the b7-B. In any case, White was able to achieve a very good position in a few moves 24.Kxg2 ]

Nach längerer Fernschach-Pause ist SIM Jens-Uwe Klügel (geboren 1958 in Schwerin in der damaligen DDR) 2015 mit der Teilnahme am Schweizer Jubiläumsturnier in das Schweizer und internationale Fernschach zurückgekehrt und fasst nach einigem Lehrgeld bezüglich Eröffnungstheorie auch in den grösseren Turnieren wieder Tritt. JensUwe Klügel lebt seit 1990 in der Schweiz und spielt seit 1992 für die Schweiz aktiv Fernschach. Seine grössten Erfolge in der Vergangenheit waren der Schweizer Meistertitel 1996 mit dem Rekordergebnis von 11½ Punkten aus 13 Partien und der Sieg im Per-Erik-Ekblom-Memorial 1998, in dem er seine bisher einzige GM-Norm erzielte. Beruflich arbeitet der diplomierte Physiker und promovierte Nuklearingenieur als Leiter Sicherheit im Kernkraftwerk Gösgen. Klügel hat mit einem Score von +5 (drei Schwarz-Siege!) das 6. Halbfinale für die 40. Weltmeisterschaft (siehe www.iccf. com/event?id=59181) gewonnen und sich so für das WM-Kandidatenturnier qualifiziert, das im kommenden September starten wird. Aus diesem Turnier stammt auch die folgende Partie, die er selber kommentiert hat. Jeder Schachspieler träumt von einem erfolgreichen Damenopfer, Klügel gelang das mit Schwarz in einem derart wichtigen Turnier. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Bxf6

8...gxf6 9.Na3 f5 Ein Angebot, von den Hauptvarianten abzuweichen.

[ 9...b5 führt zur Hauptvariante. ]

10.Bd3 Rb8 Nach meiner Kenntnis zum Zeitpunkt der Partie das erste Mal gespielt. Schwarz bereitet den thematischen Vorstoss b5 vor und entfernt den schwarzen Turm prophylaktisch aus der Diagonale h1–a8, da das Zentrum mit fxe4 geöffnet werden soll, wonach Schwarz seine Bauernschwäche d6 in ein bewegliches Bauernzentrum verwandeln will. 11.Nd5 Bg7 12.c3 fxe4 13.Bxe4 0-0 14.Nc4 f5 15.Bc2 b5 Schwarz hat in dieser Stellung bereits ein bequemes Spiel erreicht. Er verfügt über aktives Spiel am Königsflügel, das die Kontrolle des Punkts d5 durch Weiss kompensiert. 16.Nce3 Qh4 17.Nc7?! Eine kleine Ungenauigkeit. 17...f4 18.Ned5 Die beiden weissen Springer geraten ins Abseits, und es ist fraglich, ob sich der weisse König im Zentrum wohl fühlt. Die nachfolgende Variante inklusive des effektvollen 25. Sometimes it is not so easy to determine at once which bishop is the better one. At the recent Spanish team championship the olympic champion of Mallorca Alexander Moiseenko scored excellently winning 8 games and losing only one to Malakhov. Here is one of his victories. 1.e4 c5 2.Nc3 Nc6 3.Nge2 Nf6 4.d4 cxd4 5.Nxd4 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Nd5 At the Russian championship Peter Svidler opted for this set-up against Artiom Timofeev and lost. After the game Peter failed to dissuade those who suspected that he hadn't been allowed to show Kramnik's improvements in the main lines of the Sveshnikov. 7...Nxd5 8.exd5 Nb8
[ Sveshnikov believes that the fight for an opening advantage (for Black!) starts with 8...Ne7 But the younger generation considers 8...Nb8 as a more reliable and flexible. ]
9.c4 Be7 10.Be3
[ This rare move order aims at preventing the exchange of the dark-squared bishops which is Black's common idea in the lines after 10.Be2 (or 10.Bd3) a6 11.Nc3 0-0 12.0-0 f5 13.f3 Bg5 ]

13.f3 Nd7 14.Be2 Rf6 14...Nf6 would have facilitated c4-c5. Black plans an offensive of the King's Indian type. Besides the rook reinforces the control over the key square d6.

14...Bd7

[Black has gone off 14...Rc8 15.Qa4 Bd7 *(*the sharper 15...0-0!? was covered by Tony in Almasi-Sutovsky, Paks 2005 ) 16.exf5 0-0 17.0-0 , but developments in our main game may cause him to return to this closely-related position. ]

15.exf5 0-0

[The alternative is 15...Nb8!? and here too plenty of fertile territory (a rare event in today's Sveshnikov!) remains. Two opposing experts battled it out in Istratescu-Felgaer, Dresden Olympiad 2008: 16.Qg4 *(*Rogozenko points out that 16.a4!? Bxb5?! 17.axb5 Rxa1 18.Qxa1 is good for White, but I suspect that Felgaer would have maintained the tension, which looks much less clear ) 16...Kf8! (I rather like this idea the king is no less safe than on g8 and now the rook can be used to support a decoying advance of the h-pawn) 17.Bc4 *(*White should keep pieces on 17.Bxd7?! Nxd7 18.Qh5 prevents ...h5, but only Black can be better after Nf6 19.Nxf6 Qxf6 20.0-0 Ke7 with White's pawns yet to get motoring ) 17...h5 18.Qf3 Bc6 *(*the Argentinean doesn't fear f6, but he might also have allowed White his tactics down the long diagonal they don't lead anywhere and I suspect that Black should be okay too after 18...Qg5!? 19.Nb6 Ra7 20.Qd5 Qf6 21.Nxd7+ Nxd7 22.0-0 Ke7 ) 19.f6 *(*the pawn will be vulnerable here, but Black develops harmoniously after 19.0-0 Nd7 when I suspect that he hasn't any problems - 15...Nb8 most certainly deserves further attention! ) 19...Bh6 20.0-0 Nd7 21.Rfd1 Ra7 22.Qd3 *(*White goes after the d6-pawn I suspect that he wanted to play 22.a4?! , but was put off by Nb6 ) 22...Bxd5 *(*I'm not too sure why Felgaer didn't want to keep his bishops: 22...Nxf6!? 23.Nxf6 Qxf6 24.Qxd6+ Qxd6 25.Rxd6 Bd7 should give Black any winning chances which are going White's pawns are a long way back and Black is set to unravel and coordinate after ...Ke7 and ...f6 ) 23.Qxd5 Qxf6 24.Qxd6+ Qxd6 25.Rxd6 Ke7 26.Rad1 Nf6 27.Rc6 e4 28.g3 Rb8 29.b4! (at last the pawns get moving) Bg7 30.a4 Nd7 31.Bb5 and in this unbalanced but roughly equal position (White's bishop does an excellent job of shielding his pawns), a draw was agreed. ]

[As we've noted before, this is best. Instead 16.Qg4 Kh8! was Istratescu-Moiseenko, Montreal 2008, which can be found in the Archive. ]

16...e4!

[ Unable to move his knight ( 16...Nb8? 17.f6! ), Black develops some counterplay. ]

[ The alternative is 16...Rb8 17.a4 Re8 18.Qg4 Kh8 , but with 19.Qe4! White retains control and the upper hand - see Tony's notes to Almasi-Wang Yue, Paks 2006. ]

17.a4 Re8 18.Qg4

[ A relatively fashionable choice. Instead Rogozenko quite likes 18.Re1 , but Black may be okay after Kh8 19.Qg4 Re5 20.Ne3 Qf6 (Cox). This is very similar to the game, but White's rooks aren't quite so effectively located. ]

18...Kh8 19.Rad1 Re5?!

[ This looks good, but I'm not entirely convinced. Instead, as we've seen before, 19...Rb8 20.Rfe1 Qc8 21.Ne3 ( I wonder what Kotronias has prepared here I certainly don't believe that he intends to allow Black's bishops to become active with 21.Rxe4 Rxe4 22.Qxe4 Bxf5 23.Qe2 Be5 ) 21...Ne5 22.Qxe4 Bxb5 23.axb5 Rxb5 24.Nd5 Rxb2! 25.f6 was Sebag-Ushenina, Krasnoturinsk 2008, and now Bh6! would have been okay for Black, since 26.f4 Rg8! 27.fxe5 Rbxg2+ 28.Qxg2 Rxg2+ 29.Kxg2 Qg4+ forces a draw. ]

20.Ne3!

[ Kotronias' novelty and a move which improves over 20.Qf4 Bf6 21.Qe3 Rb8 22.c4 , which appeared a little misguided in Ortiz Suarez-Otero, Santa Clara 2005. ]

20...Qf6

[ This was proposed by Kolev and Nedev in 'The Easiest Sicilian', but evidently Kotronias doesn't agree with their findings! Just a few weeks before he had faced the more radical 20...d5?! , but this looks a little too desperate and 21.Rxd5 Rxd5 22.Nxd5 Ne5 23.Qxe4 Bxf5 24.Qxf5 Qxd5 25.Re1 Rd8 26.h3 left White clearly better in Kotronias-Parligras, Dresden Olympiad 2008. Black lacks counterplay here and White was able to make good use of his extra pawns: h6 27.b4 Rd6 28.Re3 Rg6 29.g3 Rg5? 30.Qc8+! Kh7 31.h4 Rg6 32.Qf5 Kg8 33.Bf1 Re6 34.a5 Qa2 35.Be2 Qd2 36.Kg2 Qd5+ 37.Qe4 Qxe4+ 38.Rxe4 Nc6 39.Rxe6 fxe6 40.a6! (the ending is an easy win due in no small part to that extra kingside pawn) Na7 41.b5 Be5 42.b6 Nc8 43.b7 Na7 44.Bc4 Kf7 45.f4 Bb8 46.f5 Nc6 47.Bxe6+ Kf6 48.Kf3 Na7 49.Bd7 Ke5 50.Kg4 Kf6 51.Ba4 Kg7 52.c4 Bc7 53.c5 Bb8 54.Kh5! Bxg3 55.f6+ Kxf6 56.Kxh6 Be5 57.Kh7 Ke6 58.h5 Kd5 59.h6 Kxc5 60.Kg8 1-0. ]

21.Qh5!

[ White keeps his queen active and so avoids 21.Qe2 Rg8! 22.Nc4 Qxf5 23.Nxe5 Bxe5 when Black develops some initiative, as the Bulgarian analysts had realised. ]

21...Ra7

[ Now in the event of 21...Rg8?! White has 22.Ng4! Qxf5 ( or 22...Qe7 23.Nxe5 Nxe5 24.Rfe1 , maintaining control ) 23.Qxf5 Bxf5 24.Nxe5 Nxe5 25.a5

when Black doesn't appear able to generate sufficient counterplay with the queens off his knight will reach d3, but White's queenside passed pawns look too dangerous. However, the text doesn't fully convince and if Black wants to keep 20... Qf6 alive, I suspect that he may need to improve here. ]

22.f4! Re8

[ This allows White to keep the position closed with some effect. However, neither would 22...exf3 23.Rxf3 Re4 have been a panacea for Black. Following 24.Rh3 h6 25.Rf1 White's pieces dominate, especially with his knight set to powerfully land on either d5 or g4. ]

23.Kh1 The opening has been a disaster for Black he lacks counterplay and is now set to come under serious pressure on the kingside. Great preparation from Kotronias! 23...Ne7 24.g4! d5?!

[ This loses a piece, but then again the alternatives were hardly appetising: 24...Ng8 25.Bxd7 Rxd7 26.g5 Qd8 27.f6 Nxf6 28.gxf6 Qxf6 doesn't really save Black, as 29.Nf5 leaves White a pawn up and with excellent winning chances, ]

[ and 24...Nc8 25.g5 Qd8 26.Bxd7 Rxd7 27.f6 Bf8 28.f5! would have led to a decisive attack. ]

25.g5 Qb6 26.Bxd7 Rxd7 27.f6 Kg8

[ The knight was immune: 27...Qxe3? 28.Qxf7 Rg8 29.fxe7 and the e-pawn is far too strong. ]

28.Qh3 Qc6 29.fxg7 White has regained his piece while maintaining control. Black has been totally crushed and might now have resigned, but Papadopoulos prefers to thrash for a couple more moves: 29...d4 30.cxd4 Nd5 31.f5 Rb7 32.g6!

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Nde2

In the Najdorf with 6.h3 e5, the move 7.Nde2 is quite standard. The idea is to get a grip on the kingside with g4, Ng3 and so on. Against the Sveshnikov the move this knight retreat is less common, as White isn't able carrying out that plan and it temporarily obstructs the bishop on f1. 6...Bc5

[The most promising option for Black. With his last move White has made 6...Bb4 less attractive for Black. ]

7.Ng3

[ White could hope for some vague attacking chances by means of 7.Be3?! Bxe3 8.fxe3 but I don't think it makes too much sense. A good reply is d6 9.Ng3 Be6 10.Bb5 Qb6 11.Qd3 0-0-0!? and White's saddled up with a chronicle weaknesses on the e-file in Cubas-Supi, Sao Paulo 2015. ]

7...0-0

[ I think this is more precise than 7...d6 in view of 8.Na4!? Bb4+ 9.c3 Ba5 10.Be2 a6 11.b4 Bc7 12.0-0 0-0 13.a3 b5?! (this only creates a target for White.) 14.Nb2 Bb7 and now in Chernyshov-Piscopo, Pardubice 2009, White could have obtained a clear advantage by means of 15.a4! ]

[ In numerous games Black opted for 7...Qb6?! 8.Qd2 Ng4? and now 9.Nd5! basically refutes Black's idea. ]

8.Bc4

[ The more modest developing move 8.Be2 has the drawback not fighting for the d5-square. I pretty much like the somewhat surprising Bb4!? ( The immediate 8...d5?! was played in Ott-Arnold, ICCF 2016 and leads to pretty insane complications. ) 9.0-0 Bxc3 10.bxc3 d5 and Black comfortably equalized in Mihai-Kloster, ICCF 2015. ]

8...d6

(Diagram)

9.Bg5

[ 9.Na4?! isn't recommended here, in view of Qa5+ 10.c3 b5! and Black seizes the initiative. ]

[ A quiet conitnuation like 9.h3 doesn't impress either, e.g. Be6 10.Bb3 Na5 11.0-0 Nxb3 12.axb3 d5 and Black is fine in Babic-Coklin, ICCF 2017. ]

[ White got to be a little bit careful, as the automatic 9.0-0 might lead to some unpleasant surprises after Ng4!? though with correct play it's still equal: 10.h3 Qh4 11.Qf3 ( 11.Nh1? Nf6 12.Qf3 Nd4 13.Qd3 and now in Peleman-Allaert, Brasschaat 2006, Black could have played a simple move like Be6 with a clear advantage. ) 11...Nd4 12.Qd3 Be6 ( 12...Nf6!? is also playable. ) 13.hxg4 Bxc4 14.Qxc4 Nf3+ 15.gxf3 Qxg3+ with a draw. ]

9...h6 10.Bxf6 Qxf6 11.0-0 Ne7 A good way to fight for the key-square d5, but Black has other good options too. Since play doesn't have a forcing character, I'll give some examples illustrating Black's ideas.

[ 11...a6 12.Nd5 Qg5 13.a4 Kh8 14.c3 a5 (I believe a very useful move, not allowing White to expand on the queenside and securing a stable for the bishop on c5) 15.Kh1 Rb8 16.Qc2 Be6 17.Qb3 h5!?

asset for Black, as it could kick the knight and weaken White's kingside. Very likely the advance of this pawn could be well combined with the moves ...g7-g6 and ...f7-f5. ]

[ 11...Be6 12.Nd5 Qg5 13.c3 a5 (compared with 11...a6, Black has saved a tempo by advancing the pawn to a5 in one go) 14.Qd3 Ne7 15.Nxe7+ Qxe7 16.Nf5 Qg5 and Black is doing OK in Mende-Graudins, ICCF 2018, as the knight isn't very likely to reach d5. Typically for this type of positions, Black can make a lot of moves, improving his position on the kingside. ]

12.Nd5 Nxd5 13.Bxd5 Be6 14.c3

[ 14.Bxe6? fxe6 will leads to problems for White along the f-file. ]

14...a5 15.Kh1 g6 16.f3 Kg7 17.a3 Bxd5 18.Qxd5 Qe6

(Diagram)

19.Qd2

[ 19.Qxb7? fails to Rab8 and Black enters on b2. ]

19...h5 20.h3

[ It's worth pointing out that 20.b4? axb4 21.axb4 Bb6 only creates new problems for White. Black is about to push the pawn to h3, which further weakens the kingside and in that perspective opening the a-file could only be to Black's advantage. ]

20...b5 21.Rab1 f6 and here the players agreed to draw in a position, where in a practical game anything could still happen. The black bishop is actively placed outside the pawn chain, while Black's pawnstructure is pretty flexible and White's dark-squares on the kingside are potentially vulnerable. I wouldn't mind playing this on with Black in a practical game!

[ 11.c4 ]

11...Nxd5 12.exd5 White has other options, but they are not really better. 12...Ne7 13.c4 g6 Let's compare this position to the one analysed on Black's 10th move. At first sight, it seems that Black just wasted one move with Bc5-d6. But a closer look reveals that that was actually good for the second player: White has placed the pawn on a square which could be useful for the development of the knight, and the Nd3 is more unstable now. Also, the plan seen in Radjabov-Naiditsch mentioned in the notes is not possible anymore. The conclusion is that White will have more practical problems to develop her pieces in a good way now. The Nd3 is always the biggest obstacle for White, and there's not a ideal solution for this task.

In dieser interessanten Eröffnung habe ich eine aktuelle Partie des WM Carlsen implementiert. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Nd5 Nxd5 8.exd5 Ne7 9.c4 Ng6 10.Qa4 Bd7 11.Qb4 Bf5 12.h4 h5 13.Bg5!? Weiß spielt den kritischen Zug. 13...Qb8 14.Be2 a6 15.Nc3 Qc7 Schwarz will seinen König nicht verwundbar in der Mitte lassen, im Gegenteil, er wird sicher versteckt, bevor er einen Angriff auf den feindlichen König startet. Dass der Preis der h5-Bauer ist, ist ohne Bedeutung.
[ In der Partie Houdini-Stockfish wurde 15...Nf4 gespielt 16.Bf1 Be7 17.Bxe7 Kxe7 18.g3 Ng6 19.Qb6 ]
16.g3 Be7 17.Be3 e4! Das ist der Schlüsselzug. Natürlich ist es möglich, ...-Nf8-d7 zu spielen, aber der Textzug ist umso verlockender, als das der Npringer nach e5 auf die Felder f3 und d3 wichtige Felder kontrolliert und beginnt, die "aggressiven" Pern h4 und g3 von Weiß wie Schwächen aussehen zu lassen. 18.Qa4+!? Fernschach like.. ....Hier kann man die besten Zügen ermitteln mit Engines,nach [ 18.0-0= hat Weiß nicht viel. 0-0 19.Bxh5 Ne5 20.Be2 Qd7 Weiß gewann einen Bauern, aber Schwarz zoomt sofort auf die wunden Stellen in der weißen Position und droht sofort 23...-Bg4, gefolgt von einer tödlichen Invasion auf dem f3-Feld. 21.Qa4 Qc8! Offensichtlich will Schwarz den Qtausch nicht zulassen, während er gleichzeitig die Drohung durch ...-Bg4 aufrecht erhält, was bedeutet, dass Weiß handeln muss 22.c5?! Zu ehrgeizig, und jetzt gibt er die Initiative an Schwarz ab. ( 22.Qd1! war der richtige Zug, um das Feld g4 zu kontrollieren. Trotzdem steht Schwarz absolut OK. Nxc4 23.Bxc4 Qxc4 24.Bd4 führt zu einer ausgeglichenen Position. ) Das ist jedoch die beste Position, die Weiß erreichen konnte, denn jetzt wird es nur noch schlimmer. 22...dxc5 23.Nxe4 c4!? Weiß war mit diesem Zug nach dem Spiel zufrieden. 25...-b5 war ebenfalls möglich und zwang Weiß mit 26. Qc2 in eine Fesselung zu geraten. Aber wie der Computer zeigt, ist nach dem 25...-c4 26.Qc2! immer noch der beste Zug, warum also Weiß in die richtige Richtung "zwingen"? ( 23...b5 24.Qc2 ) 24.Nc3 *(*Wie schon erwähnt 24.Qc2 ) 24...b5! Schwarz kann mit 26...-Bd3 27.Bxd3 Nf3+ 28.Kg2 Nxh4+ Dauerschach erzwingen, aber die Angriffsmöglichkeiten von Schwarz sind einfach zu verlockend. ( 24...Bd3 25.Bxd3 Nf3+ 26.Kg2 Nxh4+= ) 25.Qd1 b4! Ein weiterer kraftvoller Zug. Sicherlich ruiniert es die Solidität der schwarzen Bauernstruktur, aber viel wichtiger ist, dass es den weißen Npringer im Grunde genommen so weit wie möglich vom Königsflügel entfernt, wo die Partie entschieden werden soll, sowie dem schwarzen Bäufer den Zugang zum e4-Feld ermöglicht. 26.Na4 Be4 27.Qd4 *(*Falls 27.f3 dann folgt Qh3! und Schwarz gewinnt! ) 27...Qf5 Die absolut letzte Chance war. 28.f3! und nach Nxf3+ ( 28...Bxf3 29.Rae1!∓ und Weiß kämpft weiter ) 29.Bxf3 Bxf3 30.Nb6!?∓ und auch hier kann Weiß kämpfen ( 30.Qf4?-+ Weiß steht auf Verlust. )]

Another opportunity was capturing on c2 right now, but it looks like white gets a dangerous initiative in all the lines. For example: 50...Qh4+ 51.Qh3 I don't know what was the idea of GM Y. Meister during the game (or may be, it is homework?!), but I am considering this move like a main line. Also intresting is

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 gxf6 10.Nd5 This approach, for a long time the main line, remains very much in the shadow of 9 Nd5 these days. However, the fact that both the Chinese and Ivanchuk have continued to explore the immediate exchange on f6, does show that not quite everything has yet been worked out after it. 10...f5
[ Black's other move order is 10...Bg7 , the Novosibirsk Variation, although in the case of 11.c3 play transposes. Ivanchuk-Radjabov, Linares 2008, continued f5

12.exf5 Bxf5 13.Nc2 Be6 14.g3 0-0 15.Bg2 f5 *(*Black can also hold this in reserve, preferring to begin on the queenside with 15...a5!? 16.0-0 Rb8 ) 16.0-0 a5 17.Re1 Rc8 18.Nce3!? *(*a new, albeit logical move previously Ivanchuk had tried 18.Na3 against Leko back in 2001 ) 18...Kh8 *(*this looks a little slow, but Black is curiously short of a good move he can't move his queen to d7 due to the weakness of the b6-square and no doubt Radjabov was reluctant to weaken his light squares with 18...f4 ) 19.Qh5 b4 20.Rad1 bxc3 21.bxc3 Ne7 22.c4! Nxd5 *(*a little compliant I wonder if Black might not prefer to keep the tension with 22...Rc5!? when 23.Nxe7 Qxe7 24.Nd5 Qe8! leaves c4 en prise ) 23.Bxd5 and White had an edge. Food for thought. ]

11.Bd3 Be6 12.c4!? A sharp approach and one which hasn't been popular since around the time that the Soviet Union came to an end. It's new to this website and dare I say that it also came as a surprise to Krush? 12...fxe4?!

[As Black will struggle to follow up with ...f5, I'm not a fan of this exchange. Should Hou repeat her idea, or it spawn imitators, I predict that we will see some tests of the critical response, namely 12...Qa5+! 13.Kf1 ( 13.Qd2 Qxd2+ 14.Kxd2 Bh6+ 15.Ke1 bxc4 16.Nxc4 fxe4 17.Bxe4 Rd8 should be fine for Black ) 13...fxe4 ( 13...Bxd5!? 14.exd5 Nd4 is a decent alternative ) 14.Bxe4 Rc8 . This position isn't too clear, but practice has suggested that Black has enough counterplay, such as with 15.Nf6+ Kd8 16.cxb5?! Nd4! . ]

13.Bxe4 Rc8 14.0-0!

[A simple and strong novelty. White rarely wants to go pawn-grabbing in the Sveshnikov, and this position is no exception: 14.cxb5?! Nd4 15.bxa6? f5 and Black wins a piece. ]

14...Bg7

[Black is worse after this, but it seems that even the aggressive 14...Nd4 15.f4 Qh4!? would have failed to solve her problems: 16.g3! ( 16.f5?! Bxd5! 17.Bxd5 Bh6 18.cxb5 Bf4 is much less clear ) 16...Qh6 17.f5 Bxd5 18.Bxd5 Bg7 19.Nc2 Nxc2 20.Qxc2 0-0 21.Qe4 and White's light-squared grip gives him the upper hand. ]

15.f4! Nd4?!

[It's not so easy for Black to find an improvement here, as shown by the line 15...b4?! 16.Nc2 exf4 17.Nxf4! Bxc4 18.Rf2 with excellent compensation for the pawn since 0-0? fails to 19.Qh5 . ]

[However, it was probably essential to fight for the central squares with 15...Ne7! . This looks a bit suspect, especially in view of 16.f5 *(*perhaps White should prefer 16.cxb5 f5 17.Nxe7 Kxe7 18.Bd5 when Black's king is misplaced, but at least the second player is fighting ) 16...Bxd5 17.cxd5 , but after Ng8! it's by no means clear that Black is doing so badly: he will be able to castle after ...Nf6. ]

16.Qh5 b4?

[After this final inaccuracy, Black may already be lost. Krush pins her hopes on the forthcoming discovered check, only to find that Hou has seen further. Probably it was already time to undertake a serious grovel with 16...bxc4 17.f5 Bxd5

18.Bxd5 Qf6! ( 18...0-0? 19.f6! Bxf6 20.Be4 echoes the game ) 19.Nxc4 0-0 , even if all the chances are White's after 20.Rae1 . ]

17.Nxb4! Qb6 18.Nd5 The point. There is no good discovered check, double or otherwise, and now White's initiative assumes alarming proportions. 18...Qxb2 19.f5 Bxd5

[ After 19...Bd7 White wins with the neat line 20.Rab1! Qxa3 21.Qg5 Bf8 22.Rb7 and the attack is overwhelming. ]

20.Bxd5 0-0

[ Castling into it, but Black would also have been toast in the event of 20...Rf8 21.f6 Bxf6 22.Qh3! Rc7 23.Rab1 . ]

21.f6! A decisive clearance sacrifice. 21...Bxf6 22.Be4 Rfd8 23.Qxh7+ Kf8 24.Qh6+

[ Krush has had enough and doesn't wait to get mated after 24.Qh6+ Bg7 25.Rxf7+ Kxf7 26.Bd5+ Kf8 27.Rf1+ . ]

[The Polish player goes for the sharper of the two options faced with an opponent almost 400 points higher rated. I dare say that had he preferred the fashionable 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c4 b4 12.Nc2 Moiseenko would have gradually outplayed him, such as after 0-0 13.g3 Bg5 . Here White often develops his bishop, as we considered last month with the game Shirov-Krasenkow, Jurmala (rapid) 2012, but 14.h4 Bh6 15.Bh3 is always an option in this variation and was tried in I.Popov-Caruana, European Championship, Plovdiv 2012. The top seed in that event countered with a strong queen manoeuvre, Be6 16.Kf1 Qa5! 17.Kg2

Qc5 , which seems to equalise here from what I can see. Play continued 18.Qd3 ( an extremely similar position was reached after 18.b3 Ra7 19.Qd3 a5 20.Rad1 in Andriasian-Timofeev, Belgorod 2010, where play quickly became quite sharp after a4! 21.g4!? f6 22.a3!? Black must always be on his guard for this queenside counter, but with Bxd5! 23.exd5 axb3 24.axb4 Nxb4 25.Nxb4 Qxb4 the Sveshnikov expert maintained the balance, having realised that 26.g5! fxg5 27.Be6+ Kh8 28.hxg5 Ra2 29.Rdf1 Qb6 gave him sufficient counterplay ) 18...a5 19.Rhf1 Ra7 20.b3 Bxd5 ( only now does Caruana simplify, although Black might well consider too 20...a4!? , opening the a-file for counterplay, since he can meet 21.a3 with Bxd5 22.exd5 axb3 23.axb4 Nxb4 ) 21.Qxd5 Rd8 22.Rfd1 Qb6 23.Qb5 Qc7! 24.Qa4 g6 25.Rd3 Nd4 and the game remained roughly balanced, with the presence of opposite-coloured bishops helping it to end unsurprisingly in a draw. ]

9...gxf6 10.Nd5 f5 11.Bxb5!?

[ Weichhold was certainly familiar with the teachings of 'Chess for Tigers' and mixes it up in a bid to throw his grandmaster opponent. Another piece sacrifice is 11.Bd3 Be6 12.c3 Bg7 13.Nxb5!? axb5 14.Bxb5 Bd7 15.exf5 , as we've covered on several occasions. Black usually castles at this point and the interested subscriber will find plenty of analysis on that in the Archive, but Rb8 can be tried as an attempt to avoid a theoretical battle. However, in another recent game, 16.a4 Rg8!? ( the independent try, but this may ask too much of Black's position he might thus prefer to take play into one of the main lines with 16...0-0 17.0-0 Re8 ) 17.Qf3 ( we've previously seen that 17.0-0 Ne7 18.Ne3 d5 19.Qf3 Bxb5 20.axb5 e4 21.Qe2 , as in Vallejo Pons-Krasenkow, Spanish Team Championship 2010, should be met by Qd7! when Black seems to be OK,; as he is after 17.Ne3 Ne7 18.Qxd6 Bxb5 19.Qxd8+ Kxd8 20.axb5 Rxb5 , whereupon D.Mastrovasilis-Van Wely, European Championship, Porto Carras 2011, ended in a repetition with 21.Ra6 Kc7! 22.f6 Kb7 23.Rd6 Kc7 24.Ra6 Kb7 ) 17...Ne7 18.Ne3 Bf6 19.0-0! ( a new and quite dangerous move for us in the notes to Stefansson-Stany, New Delhi 2011, we saw that after 19.Ng4 Bg5 20.h4 Black was able to maintain the material balance in So-S.Zhigalko, Khanty-Mansiysk 2010, with h5! 21.Nxe5 Bd2+! 22.Kxd2 dxe5 23.Kc2 Bxb5 24.axb5 Qb6 , which was at least OK for him ) 19...d5 ( making use of his extra pawns in the centre Black had to avoid *19...Bxb5? 20.axb5 Rxb5 21.Ra8 Rb8 22.Rfa1 d5 23.Nxd5! That continued

A) the knight was annoying placed, but this doesn't help Black had to prefer

23...Rxb2 , although even here after 24.Qh3!? ( 24.a7 Ra8 25.Qh3 Ke8 26.Qxh7 Rb7 27.Qh6 Ng8 28.Qe3 e4 29.f3 Qb6 is fine for Black ) 24...Rbb8 25.a7 Ra8 26.c4! White has definite chances to retain the initiative;

B) 23...h5?! 24.Ne3 e4 25.Qe2! (menacing an advance of the a-pawn followed by Ra6) Qc6 26.a7 Rb6 27.Qxh5 Rxb2 28.Qxf7 and Black was crushed. I've previously been quite a fan of the idea of 15...Rb8 and 16...Rg8, but the ball is certainly back in Black's court after Azarov's new idea. ]

11...axb5 12.Nxb5 Ra7?!

[A surprising choice. I think we have to assume that Moiseenko wanted to avoid any preparation and maybe didn't trust his memory on the main move, 12...Ra4 , rather than had a new idea in mind. The main line runs 13.Nbc7+ Kd7 14.0-0 and now Black is OK as far as I know after

A) Another idea here is 14...Rg8!? , which received a recent 2600+ test, with 15.g3 ( 15.Qh5 is the alternative, but after Qg5 16.Qxf7+ Be7 17.g3 Qg6 18.Qxf5+ Qxf5 19.exf5 Nd4 Black should have enough counterplay, especially as White's knights are currently tied down defending each other ) 15...Qh4 16.c4 f4 17.Qb3 *(*it's a draw too in the event of 17.Nf6+ Qxf6 18.Nd5 Qh4 19.Qxa4 fxg3 20.hxg3 Rxg3+ ) 17...Rb4! 18.Qa3! ( 18.Nxb4? Nd4 19.Qd3 would only have been dangerous for White after f3 20.Rfe1 Qh3 21.Qf1 Kxc7 , since his light-square problems will persist ) 18...Ra4 19.Qxa4 fxg3 and a draw was agreed in Li Chao-Yu Yangyi, Hefei (rapid) 2011, in viewing of the coming perpetual.;

B) 14...Rxe4 - see the notes to Vallejo Pons-San Segundo Carrillo, San Sebastian 2009, for some explanation. ]

13.Nxa7 Nxa7 14.c3 Comparing this variation to the one we considered with Azarov-Krasenkow above, it's hard not to feel that White has a good deal. He isn't a piece down for three pawns, but rather has a rook and two pawns for the two bishops. Of course, those prelates should never be underestimated, but then again neither should White's queenside majority. 14...Nc6

[Instead 14...Bg7!? 15.Qa4+ ( 15.0-0!? , with the idea of fxe4 16.Qa4+ Qd7 17.Qxe4 0-0 18.a4 f5 19.Qc4 , may improve those queenside pawns begin to look quite scary here ) 15...Qd7 16.Qxd7+ Bxd7 17.exf5 was agreed drawn in Tovmasian-Biriukov, Kharkiv 2011. After Bxf5 18.0-0 Kd7 19.a4 Be6 20.Rfd1 e4! Black surely has at least enough counterplay, but I've no doubt White can improve on this sequence. ]

15.exf5 Qh4?! This has been played before, but just asks too much of Black's position from what I can see. Take the stronger player out of their comfort zone and allow them to become too ambitious... Instead Black should just recapture the pawn.

16.0-0 Bh6

[A new move, but it doesn't especially help. Previously 16...Bxf5 17.Qf3 ( 17.f4!? could be even better ) 17...Be6 18.g3 Qh3 19.b4 Be7 was tried in Aranha Filho-Madeira, Sao Paulo 2004, and now one good continuation would have been 20.Nxe7 Nxe7 21.Rad1 d5 22.Qf6 , ]

[while 16...Rg8 17.f4! Be7 18.Qf3 Bd7 19.a4 Bd8 20.b4 saw Black being pushed off the board in Sengupta-Shankar, Kolkata 2001. ]

17.g3

[Pushing back the queen while preparing to activate his own, with some advantage, but 17.Nb6! would have been extremely strong: for example, 0-0 ( 17...Bxf5? 18.Qxd6 leads to carnage ) 18.Qxd6 Bb7 19.Nd7 Rd8 20.Rad1 when White dominates the board, as there no good way for Black to exploit the pin. ]

17...Qd8 18.Qh5 Qg5!

[Not what Black wanted to do I dare say, but there was little choice, with 18...Bg7 19.f4! 0-0 20.fxe5 Bxe5 21.Rae1 beginning to look quite grim for him. White even has any kingside attack which is going here. ]

19.Nc7+ Ke7

[As the two bishops will always cause some problems once the queens are off, Black might have done better with 19...Kd8!? , intending 20.Qxf7 ( 20.Qxg5+ Bxg5 21.Nb5 is likely a better try ) 20...Qxf5 21.Qxf5 Bxf5 22.Nb5 Ke7 . ]

20.Qf3

[Good, although so too would have been 20.f6+!? , since the pawn is taboo and Kd8 21.Qxf7 Rf8 22.Ne6+ Bxe6 23.Qxe6 Rxf6 24.Qc4 must be virtually winning for White. ]

20...Bb7?

[The final mistake. He had to try 20...Bd7 21.Nd5+ Kd8 , even though White would have been well placed here to begin pushing his pawns. ]

21.h4! Kicking the black queen again and decisively seizing the initiative. 21...Qd2

[Now White's pieces invade, but 21...Qg8 22.Rfd1 Qb8 23.Nd5+ Ke8 24.Qh5 would have been pretty hopeless too. ]

22.Rad1 Qc2 23.Qh5! Rg8?

[Moiseenko was already having a shocking game and this just makes it even worse, threatening nothing and allowing the rook to be forked. Black was objectively lost in any case, but might have tried 23...Nd4!? , hoping for 24.cxd4 ( 24.f6+! Kd8 25.Rxd4 exd4 26.Qxf7 does the business, but would not be trivial to spot with little time ) 24...Be3! 25.dxe5 Qe4 , although even here White has a few ways to win, including 26.Rd5! Bxd5 27.exd6+ Kd7 28.Nxd5 Qxd5 29.fxe3 . ]

24.Nd5+ Kd8 25.Qxh6 Kd7

[Black might have well resigned. His rook now drops off, but the game would have been up too in the event of 25...Qxf5 26.Qxd6+ Qd7 27.Qc5 . ]

In today's database there are selected encounters from two recent Dutch tournaments. The featured game is the victory of the Young Masters hero, GM Sergei Zhigalko of Belarus. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Nd5 This is an important sideline. I never liked it for White because Black gets the pawn majority on the kingside, but basically it is a matter of taste. 7...Nxd5 8.exd5 Diagram

14...Bg5 15.Bf2 Qf6 16.Na4!?

[More often played has been 16.Qc2 Nc5 17.Be2 a5 18.Na4 Nxa4 19.Qxa4 e4! ]

17...e4! This typical pawn sacrifice seems to be logical here. 18.fxe4 Ne5?!

[Two serious alternatives, already tried in email games are 18...f4 19.Bd4 Bf6 (hoping to push ...f3 later somehow) ]

[and 18...fxe4 19.Bxe4 Nf6!? . ]

Black probably wished to preserve both options, ...fxe4 and ...f4 but after White's next none of them would be good. 19.Bd4! Diagram

19...Bf4!N The best chance, as it seems.
[ It is too late for playing 19...f4? because after 20.Bxe5 dxe5 21.c5!? Black is in trouble: if f3 22.Rxf3 Rxf3 23.Qxf3 Bd7 24.Rf1 ]

26.Bxf2 Rf8 27.Rd1!? Ba5 Diagram

28.Bb6? White's desire to trade a pair of bishops is understandable, but his move loses, because the knight on b6 will be not only passive, but also vulnerable.
28...Bxb6+ 29.Nxb6 Two precise moves now win a piece for Black. 29...Qf6!
30.Qe2□ Diagram

30...h5!-+ Black is threatening with 31...Bg4. White's queen now cannot move because it covers f1, f2, f3 and b2. And if White plays with a rook, then 31...Qd4+ wins the knight. So, the fight is over.

[Black could have tried: 18...Qxe7 19.Nd5 Qd8 20.Ra2 Kg7 , followed by f5, with interesting play. ]
19.Ra2 a4 20.Nd5 Bg5 Black is in trouble already because his counter play is nonexistent. You cannot hold in the Sveshnikov as black by passive play. The move a5-a4 was also a mistake. The pawn will be lost after Rfa1, Bc4-d3-c2. It is almost always left at a5, because it is not easy for White to target it there. 21.Qe2 Rb8 22.Rfa1 Qc8 23.Nb4 Kg7
[ 23...Kh8 (not Kg7 as in the game). The king should go to the corner and leave the g-file free for if and when a black rook needs it. Now Black is able to exploit the weaknesses on b2 and d3 to drum up counterplay. However, he would have faced far more serious defensive difficulties after the simple 35.Qg4! , taking control of the d4-square. This is not a very grandmasterly performance from the Russian. 8...b5 9.Nd5 Dieser Nzug ist populär geworden nach der Partie Ponomariov Teil - Kramnik, Wijk aan Zee 2005. In den letzten Jahren versucht Weiß die "widerlegung" der Sveshnikov Variation fast ausschließlich mit dem Tausch des N auf f6. Mit dem Textzug N d5 beabsichtigt Weiß, das Feld d5 zu besetzen mit Kontrolle des Zentrums. The idea of the 9. Nd5 line, as I understand it, is that black cannot get away with challenging the knight this easily. Presumably the kingside weaknesses are too much if black is also without his dark-squared bishop. But black says: "show me".' 12.Nxf6+ gxf6 13.Bd3 Hartwig,Th: 'The bishop often stays put for a long time in these lines, so this isn't an obvious case of "finish development, get castled",... especially if you see how white continues! Regarding development of the bishop to d3 in general - it is meant to be prophylactic, I think, against ...d5 and ...f5, but white has to show some care in that the bishop can find itself misplaced if black gets an opportunity to play ...f5 as a sac and then start rolling the center.'

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 This move is rarely played, despite it looking perfectly natural. 6.Ndb5 d6!? I must confess that I was unaware of this move before seeing this game, despite the fact that it's been tried out by one or two very strong players. 6...Bd6 is more dynamic than 6... Be7, and one of the points is that d4-d5 can now be answered by ... c6 without fear of White playing d5-d6 - a big worry with the bishop on e7. With White's main positional idea less effective, he has to search for other ways to try for an advantage. 7.Bg5 a6!? This is Black's idea - the threat of ... h4-h3 can be annoying. 8.Na3 b5 9.Nd5 Be7 A novelty. 10.Bxf6 Bxf6!? If White is allowed to consolidate then his centre will promise him some advantage, so unsurprisingly Sutovsky continues actively. 11.c3 0-0 12.Nc2 Rb8 13.b4 Bg5 14.h4? The wrong recapture, and suddenly White's in big trouble. 14...Bh6 15.a4 Ne7 16.Nxe7+ White blocks the f-file so that he can castle, but... 16...Qxe7! 17.axb5 axb5 18.Ra5 Bb7! ...and Black's advantage is already decisive.

[ 18...Qc7! is the idea 19.Qa1!? is another possibility. Qc6 is met by 20.f3! Bf4 21.Bd3! and here preventing ... Nb3 with Bg3+? is asking for trouble after 22.Ke2 d5 23.exd5! - Qxd5 24.c4 Qe6 25.Ne3 bxc4 26.Bxc4 nets the exchange. Qd6? 27.b5! is a nice point behind 13...Nc6 not Bf4? ]

19.Bd3 Qc7 20.0-0 Qxc3 21.Rxb5 Bxe4 22.Rxb8 Bxd3 Black simply builds up the pressure - 23...Rf1+ is an almost incidental threat. The rest is easy. 23.Rxf8+ Kxf8 24.b5 Ke7 25.Nb4 Qxb4 26.Qxd3 e4! Black threatens a decisive fork with ... Ne2+, and 27.Rb1 exd3 can be met by the deflecting 28.Rxb4 , e.g. 28...Kd7 29.Kf1! - another deflection! - 29...d2 30.Ke2 and Black wins. 30...Kc7 31.b6+ Kb7 32.f4 f6 33.Kxd2 g5 has the threat of 34.g3 gxh4 followed by 35.gxh4 Bf8 36.Kd3 d5 and mate. White can do little except give up a couple of pawns, but then he is a pawn down with a rotten position. On the other hand, after 37.Rb5! he could be doing well, or at least much better than in the game. One possible continuation is 37...Bd6!? (an amazing piece offer) 38.Rxd5 Bxf4 39.Ke4 Bg3 when Black is a temporarily a piece down but his queen dominates and the knight on b7 isn't escaping: 40.Rh5 Kxb6 41.Rxh7 Kc5 42.Kf5 Be5 and Black has excellent compensation. But 43.h5 Kd6 44.h6! is much more of a challenge for Black - 44...Kd5?

[V.Barsky (www.chesstoday.net)]

After such a game like the following one the most sensitive players might give up playing the Sveshnikov Sicilian for Black altogether! Of course Bauer's play in this game looks very impressive, but he didn't refuse this very solid set up - simply his opponent made some inaccurate moves in the opening. 1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 Nf6

[By the way Evgeny Sveshnikov himself has preferred 4...e5 for many years. He told me not once that Black has to have problems in "his" system with 4...e5, but he didn't tell me where! ]

5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 d6 7.Bg5 a6 8.Na3 b5 9.Bxf6 D

The most principle line. 9...gxf6 10.Nd5 f5 11.c3 Bg7 12.Bd3 Be6 13.Qh5 0-0 14.0-0

[Take a look at one of the first games in this line: 14.g4 fxg4 15.Nc2 f5 16.Nde3 f4 17.Nxg4 Kh8 18.Rg1 Rb8 19.a3 a5 20.Kf1 Qd7 21.Ne1 Qf7 22.Qh4 Qe7 23.Qh5 Bf7↑ Tseshkovsky,V-Sveshnikov,E/Sochi 1974. White's idea is very clear: he wants to improve his control over the key-point f5 and return his knight a3 into play. But White has to find a better way of executing this plan. ]

14...f4

[ In case of 14...fxe4 15.Bxe4 f5 White has very unpleasant intermediate move 16.Nf4! exf4 17.Bxc6 Rc8 18.Qe2 Be5 19.Bf3± Berczes,C-Smith,A/Stockholm SWE 2007. ]

15.g4!? D

15...Kh8 To my mind this move is a bit slow.

[ One of the main specialists in this set up GM Pavel Smirnov used two other moves here: 15...h6 16.Nc2 Rb8 17.Rfd1 a5 18.a3 Ne7 19.Ne1 Nxd5 20.exd5 Bxd5 21.Bh7+ Kxh7 22.Qf5+ Kg8 23.Rxd5 Qe7 24.Rad1 Rb6 25.Nf3⩲ Areshchenko,A-Smirnov,P/Moscow RUS 2006 ]

[ 15...Rb8!? 16.Nc2 a5 17.a3 Ne7 18.Rad1 Qd7 19.h3 Bxd5 20.exd5 f5 21.f3 Rf6⇄ Amonatov,F-Smirnov,P/Sochi RUS 2006 ]

[ In case of 15...fxg3?! 16.fxg3 f5 17.Nc2 Ne7 18.Nce3 Bxd5 19.Nxd5 Nxd5 20.exd5 e4 21.Bc2 White is better because Black has to defend his weak pawn f5. ]

16.Kh1 Rg8 17.g5 D

17...f5? This move is a clear mistake, now the light-squares in Black's camp become very weak. Better was

[ 17...Ne7 for example: 18.f3 Bf8 19.Rad1 Rg7 20.Bc2 Ng8 21.Rg1 Be7 22.h4 Rg6 23.Bb3 Rb8 24.Rd2 a5⇄ Polgar,J-Nunn,J/Monte Carlo 1994 ]

18.Rad1 Bxd5 19.g6! h6 20.exd5 Ne7 21.Bxf5 Nxf5 22.Qxf5 Qh4

[ Perhaps more stubborn was 22...Rf8 23.Qh3 f3 ]

23.Qe4! D

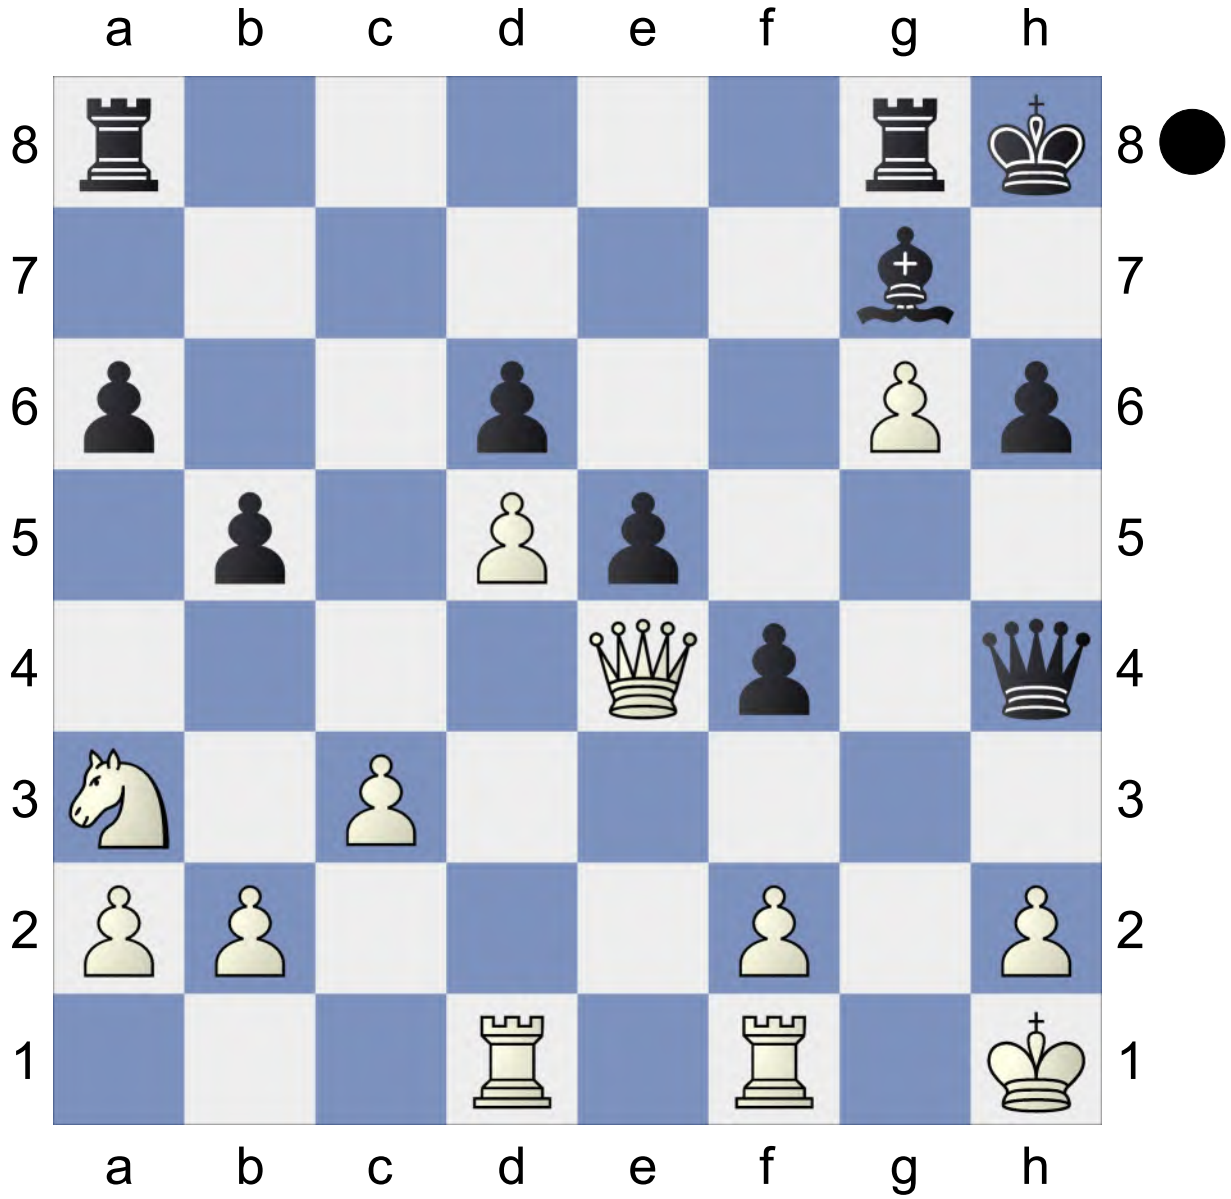
(Diagram)



The poor bishop g7! Now White's only task - to activate his knight on a3. 23...Raf8 24.Nb1

[Another good way - 24.f3 Qh5 25.Rg1 Rf5 26.Rg4± ]

24...Rf6 25.f3 Bf8 26.Rg1 Qh5 27.g7+ Rxg7 28.Rxg7 Bxg7 29.Rg1 Rf5 30.Nd2 Rg5 31.Rxg5 D

32.Qe2 g4!? This is the point: Black tries to activate his central pawns. 33.fxg4 Qh3 34.Qf3! Qh4

[Alas Black could not have exchanged queens: 34...Qxf3+ 35.Nxf3 e4 36.Ng5 e3 37.Kg2+- ]

45...e3?
[The last mistake in this very interesting game was made by Black! It looks like he had a draw after 45...Be5! 46.Kh5 f3 ( 46...Bxd6 47.Nxd6 e3 48.g6+ Kg8 49.Kh6 e2 50.Ne4 e1Q 51.Nf6+ Kf8 52.g7+ Ke7 53.g8Q Qh4+ 54.Nh5 Qxh2= ) 47.g6+ Kg8 48.d7 Bc7 49.Ne7+ Kg7 50.Nf5+ Kg8 51.Ne7+ Kh8 52.Kh6 Bf4+ 53.Kh5 Bc7= ]

9.Bxf6 ... just a 2nd favored book move but my favored move after a deep analysis, and staying in the Buse game.

[ 9.Nd5 Be7 10.Bxf6 Bxf6 11.c3 0-0 ( 11...Ne7 12.Nxf6+ gxf6 13.Be2; 11...Bg5 12.Nc2 Rb8 13.a4 bxa4 14.Nce3 ) 12.Nc2 Bg5 13.a4 bxa4 14.Rxa4 a5 15.Bc4 Rb8 ( 15...Bd7; 15...Ne7 )]

9...gxf6 10.Nd5 ...book move 10...f5 ... my opponent remained true. Now came the critical decision: to follow the book thus leaving Myakutin's games played so far, or to follow his prior games? My desire to reach that exciting Buse position, sacrificing a knight, was the deciding factor so I deviated from book 11.c3 the second most popular book move but most importantly remaining in the Buse - Kochemasov game.

Up to here I had already analyzed very widely and deeply, but with slightly better results for the alternatives.

[ 13.Nc2 0-0 ]

13...Bxd5?! my opponent replied only after a long think--I surprised my opponent entirely! And unbelievably he replied with a move which deviated from all analysis and from my stem game! Now I am on my own already, the battle starts

13.Be2 White hasn't managed to play e4-e5 advantageously and a complex maneuvring struggle ensues. White's plan is not easy to define, trying to sum it up we can say: 1/ safeguard his e4 outpost, 2/exert pressure against d6, possibly after Black's g6 on the long diagonal (Qc1-a1!?) 3/after thorough preparation possibly advance his » pawns. This is easier said than done, Black's Hedgehog is very solid and difficult to break up even if defended passively. The practical examples prove that if White overreaches, he can be severely punished.

19.b4 Ra3 The point of Black's play White's queenside pawns have been halted, although this has come at the cost of having to allow an f6-wedge. 20.f6 Bh6 21.0-0 0-0 22.g3 Qg4 23.Rfd1

[ 15.Qf3 which is analysed in Oleksienko, M (2530)-Zherebukh, Y (2321)/Lviv UKR 2006. ]

15...Rb8! Best.
[ 15...Qb7 was examined in Chandler, M-Darnstaedt, F. ]
16.exf5 e4 17.Rae1 The only move to counter both the threats of ...Bxb2 and ... exd3. 17...Bb7 18.cxb5!? White plays an old idea. There are plenty of alternatives, but they all seem OK for Black:
[ 18.Re3!? is also possible, both defending a3 laterally, and menacing to swing to the kingside, bxc4 19.Bxc4 d5 20.Bxd5 Bxd5 21.f6 Qxf6 22.Qxd5 1/2-1/2 Geller, J (2501)-Yakovich, Y (2576)/Salekhard RUS 2006, no doubt prearranged as this has been seen before many times. ]
[ 18.Nc2 bxc4 19.Bxc4 d5 20.Bxd5 Bxd5 21.f6 Qxf6 22.Qxd5 Rxb2 23.Ne3 Qe6 is fine for Black, Short, N (2685)-Illescas Cordoba, M (2555)/Linares 1992. ]
[ 18.Qg4 is the established mainline. ]
18...d5 Black defends his e-pawn, the loss of his queenside is unimportant. 19.bxa6
[ 19.Re3!? is interesting, Bxb2 20.bxa6 Bc6 Rodin, M (2345)-Prosvirin, M/St Petersburg 1993, when 21.Nc2 Be5 22.Be2 is possible, the white pieces are awkardly placed, but he does have two extra pawns. ]
19...Bc6 20.Bb1?! A new move, but I am not really sure that the bishop is doing much here, apart from defending the a-pawn.
[ 20.Re3 Rxb2 21.Rh3 h6 22.Bb1?! is similarly faulty, ( 22.Be2! ) 22...Ra8 23.Rg3 Qf6 24.Nc2 Bb5 Black is close to winning, Donner, B-Ikonnikov, V (2485)/ Berlin 1993. ]
20...Bxb2
[ 20...Rxb2 is also strong, of course. ]
21.Re3 f6 Black defends the h7-pawn - the dark-squared bishop will have a good post on e5. 22.Nc2 d4 23.Rg3+ Kh8 24.a3 Bb5 25.Re1 Bc3?!
[ 25...Bxa6 is simple and good, Black can defend the e4-pawn by ...Bb7. ]
26.Rd1?!
[ 26.Rxc3! dxc3 27.Nb4 wins the e-pawn and frees the white pieces: Qd6 28.Bxe4 Bxa6 29.h3 looks about equal, although the c3-pawn could prove dangerous. ]
26...Ba4 27.Rf1 Rb2 28.Nb4 e3! This is Black's dream in this variation, his bishops are powerful and his centre unstoppable. 29.fxe3 dxe3 30.Bd3 Bxb4 31.axb4 e2 Winning a piece. 32.Bxe2
[ 32.Re1?? Qa7+ 33.Kh1 Qf2 ]
32...Rxe2 33.h3 Bb5 Temporarily White has 3 pawns for a piece, but the queenside ones are weak and soon lost. 34.Rf4?! Qa7+ 35.Kh2 The king is forced to go for a little walk. 35...Re1 36.Rg6 Qg1+ 37.Kg3 Qe3+ 38.Rf3 Qe5+ 39.Kh4 Re4+ 40.g4 Be8!?
[ 40...Rf7 defends h7 and stops a7, and wins quickly. ]
41.Qh6 Qe7 42.b5 Bxg6 43.fxg6 Re6 44.Rc3? This loses immediately. White could still have tried [ 44.Qxh7+ Qxh7+ 45.gxh7 Kxh7 46.Ra3 Rb6 47.Ra5 relying on his two passers, although Kg7 should win, the king comes to help capture the white pawns. ]

[Earlier I have tried the move 13.g3 which has got the same strategic idea. White's next move will be h4 and then Bh3 to challenge the black bishop on c8. An exchange of those bishop is the dream for White which will give him full controll of the d5-square for the rest of the game. ]
13...0-0 14.Bg4 Be6 15.Qf3 White puts more pressure on the black position and might continue with Qh3 later on in some variations in order to force an exchange of the light squared bishops. 15...Bg5N Black likes to avoid getting a double pawn on the f-file.
[ 15...a4!? has been tried before in 2001, but only once and not with very strong players. However this move is not bad at all. It puts White under immidiate pressure and having a double pawn on the f-file is not such terrible. Black now threatens ...b3 to get the d4 square for his knight. The game continued 16.0-0 Rb8 17.b3 with an interesting position. ]
16.Rd1!? During the game I felt that I had to act quickly before Black consolidates with ...Rb8 and ...Qd7, but my opponents strong reply came as a surprise to me. I think White had done better playing [ 16.0-0 in order to get the king into safety first. Another important fact is that the rook on a1 plays an important role in case of a quick ...a4, ...b3 break from Black. ]
16...a4! Black makes use of the temporarily bad placement of the white pieces before White manages to get in control. 17.Ndxb4 This is a very risky continuation for White. However there is no other way for White to prevent the ...b3-break. 17...Nxb4 18.Nxb4 a3? This move looks logical, but it actually makes things more simple for White. I was much more concerned about [ 18...Qa5 19.a3 Bxc4 20.Qc3 Qb5 when Black is in perfect control with his strong bishop pair. White is strugling to castle and his backward pawn on b2 might be another problem later on. ]

19.bxa3 Bxc4 20.Qc3 Bb5

[ 20...Qc7 is well met by 21.h4 Bh6 22.Nd3 and then White is ready to castle. ]

21.Be2 Bxe2 22.Kxe2 It might seem like Black have succeded by splitting the pawnstructure for White on the queenside and getting the king stuck in the centre. However it is rather White that is benefiting from this as now he has finally managed to exchange the light squared Bishops giving him full control over the d5 square which will be a perfect place for the knight later on. The only thing that speaks in Black's favour is the temporarily bad placement of the white king and so he must act quickly in order to try to make use of this. 22...Qd7

[ I was expecting Black to play 22...Qa5 with the idea to exchange d6 agianst a3 and Black does have drawing chances. 23.Rxd6 ]

23.h4 This move forces Black to take an important decision about where he would like to place his bishop. 23...Bh6

[ After the intermidiate move 23...Rfc8 White should continue

A) My original intension to play 24.Qh3 to force a queen exchange fails after Qb5+ 25.Qd3 Rc4! with a very strong initiative for Black. White is in big trouble and has to give up material. The main point is 26.hxg5 ( 26.Kf3 is not much better after Qc5! threatening ...Rc3 which White has no good defence against. ) 26...Rxa3 winning the queen.;

B) 24.Qd3 ]

24.f3 White takes control over the g4-square to prevent the queen check. This move also clears the square f2 for the white king. White is aiming for to play g3 and then hide his king on g2. in the next few moves White gradually consolidates his position and it seems hard for Black to create any real counterplay. 24...Rfc8 25.Qb3 Qb5+ 26.Rd3 Rc4 27.Rhd1 Rac8 28.Kf2! Going out of the pin and threatening to play g3 followed by Kg2 which would bring the king into safety. 28...Qb6+ 29.Kf1 Rc1 Black's position now looks rather active, but he doeesnt 't have threats. White is slowly taking over. 30.Nd5 Qd8 31.Rxc1 A practical decision in the begining of the time trouble. However this seems to give Black good counterplay when acting in the correct way. Better was

[ 31.g3! protecting the h4 pawn first before going into action. ]

31...Rxc1+ 32.Rd1 Rc8? Black decides to keep the rook in hope to disturb the white king later on. However this is just helping White who know keeps a clear plus and has an easy game. Much better was

[ 32...Rxd1+ 33.Qxd1 Qxh4 and Black has good counterplay with chances to get perpetual checks. During the game I had assessed the position as clearly better after 34.Qb3 when White is both threatening mate and to push the a-pawn. However things are not that simple after g6 threatening ...Qh1+. 35.Qb8+ ( 35.a4? is a mistake in view of Qh1+ 36.Kf2 Bd2! and suddenly the white king is in trouble 37.g4 Qe1+ 38.Kg2 Qe2+ 39.Kg1 Kg7∓ ) 35...Kg7 36.Qxd6 Qh1+ 37.Kf2 Qh4+ 38.Ke2 Qg5 Now Black is threatening perpetual checks with ... Qd2+ so White's only winning atempt is to continue with 39.Kd3!? Qd2+ 40.Kc4

Qxa2+ 41.Kb5 The position is objectively about equal, but Black still has to prove this with some accurate defence not allowing White to push the a-pawn forward. ]
33.g3 g5 This is a clear sign of desperation from Black. White was threatening to consolidate with Kg2 followed by a rook transfer to the second rank after which there are no worries left. 34.h5! Closing the position and thretening g4 to destroy the black bishop on h6 completely. 34...g4□ The only sensible move for Black, but it does not really crate any real counterplay for him. 35.fxg4 Bg5
[ 35...Qg5 is easy met by 36.Kg2 followed by Kh3 and the white king is in safety. ]
36.Kg2 Rc5 37.Rf1 Qa8 38.Kh3 Having calculated the line 38.Ne7+ for a few minutes I suddenly got short of time and decided to do a safe move in order to complete the time control.
[ 38.Rxf7!+- is an easy win and also ]
[ 38.Ne7+ wins after Kh8 *(*or 38...Bxe7 39.Qxf7+ Kh8 40.Qxe7 Qxe4+ 41.Kh3+- ) 39.Qxf7+- which was what I calculated. However I didn't see a stright forward win after Rc7 but either Ng6+ or Qf8+ is quite enough to win the game. ]
38...Qa7 39.a4 Another safe move. I was also considering
[ 39.Rf5 h6 40.Rxg5+ hxg5 41.Qe3± which should be winning comfortable as well, but short of time I decided to play simple. ]
39...Kg7 40.Qf3 Rc2 41.Qf5 h6 42.Nf6 Bxf6 43.Qxf6+ Kg8 44.g5 Qd7+ 45.Rf5 Qe6 46.Qxe6 fxe6 47.Rf6 hxg5 48.Rxe6 Rxa2 49.Kg4 Rxa4 50.Kf5! Black has managed to reach a rook endgame with equal material for the moment, but the truth is that all his pawns are weak and he will soon loose at least two of them.

15.Bf1 Bg7N A new move in a well known position. Black wants to save time by occupying the f-file immediately. The move Nf7, which can be a problem in many cases after the standard 15. - 0-0-0, is also prevented. Unfortunately for Black another good N-move has become possible. 16.c3!± This simplifies the position and leaves White with a slight but pleasant endgame advantage. 16...0-0 17.Qh5

[ 16...Ne5 is generally considered to be inaccurate due to 17.b4 b6 18.Be3 with advantage for White, who quickly plays c4-c5. However, as pointed out by the Argentinian player J.Morgado instead of 17...b6 Black can consider 17...Ng6 18. Bg3 Bh4, or first insert 17...a5 and then ... Ng6. Things are not that clear then. ]

17.Qd2 With the help of this move White has achieved very good results in practice. This might give the impression that Black is worse. In reality, just as in most positions arising in the 7.Nd5 Variation, both sides have about equal chances and usually the stronger player wins. 17...Bxf4 This standard exchange justifies 17.Qd2 in a way and therefore postponing it for a while also deserves attention.

24.Qh5 fxe4 25.Rxe4 Ng6 26.Rg4 Now Rxg6 is in the air, though it is easy for Black to defend against this. 26...Rg8 27.Nf5 White decides to abandon his queenside pawns to lunge at Black's king. The comp calls it even. 27...Rbf8
[Alternatively, 27...Qxb3 28.Qxh6 Qe6 29.Rg5 Nf4 30.Rxg8+ Rxg8 31.Qxe6 Nxe6 32.Nxd6 is a likely draw. ]
28.Nxh6 Rg7 29.g3 d5?! Black undoubtedly wanted to meet Rxg6 ideas with ... Qxg6, but it may not be wise to loosen the centre like this.
[Instead, 29...Rc7! maintains the balance after 30.b4 axb4 31.cxb4 Rxf2!

32.Rxf2 Rc1+ 33.Kg2 Qc6+ 34.Re4! Qxe4+ 35.Qf3 Qxf3+ 36.Rxf3 Rb1 37.Nf7+ Kg7 38.Nxd6 Rxb4 39.Rf7+ Kh6 . Black won't be able to convert the extra pawn. ]

30.Kg2?!

[ 30.Rg5! e4 , intending ...e4-e3, is met by 31.Rf5 with pressure for White. ]

30...Qf6 31.f3?

[ 31.Kg1! e4 32.Rg5 (intending Rf5) Ne7 33.Rxg7 Qxg7 34.Kh2 e3 35.Ng4 Rf5 36.Qe8+ Rf8 37.Qh5 Rf5 is a repetition draw. ]

31...e4! 32.f4 e3?!

[ Correct was 32...Qxc3! 33.Nf5 Qd2+ 34.Rf2 Qd3! 35.Nxg7 e3 36.Rf1 Qd2+ 37.Kh3 e2 38.Rf2 Qe1! 39.Rxe2 (forced) Qxe2 and White loses his knight, since 40.Nf5?? is met by Qf3! (threatening mate on h1) 41.Kh2 Qf2+ 42.Kh3 Qf1+ 43.Kh2 Ne5! 44.fxe5 Rxf5 45.Qe8+ Rf8 46.Qh5 Rf2# . ]

EXERCISE (critical decision): Black's last move sets up a sneaky trap. White's choice is between initiative or material. Should he play 33 Qxd5, or push for the initiative with 33 f5 - ? One line should hold the game, while the other loses. Which one do you pick? 33.Qxd5?? Okay then, let's just stick a finger into the live light socket. White misinterprets the poisoned d-pawn as a shining symbol of a second chance.

[ ANSWER: 33.f5! should save the game for White:

A) 33...Ne5 34.Rxg7 Kxg7 ( 34...Qxg7 35.f6! Qc7 36.Ng4 is also okay for White ) 35.Ng4 Nxg4 36.Qxg4+ Kh8 37.Qd4 Qxd4 38.cxd4 and the resulting ending should be a draw.;

B) 33...Qxc3 34.Rxg6 Qd2+ 35.Kh3 e2 36.Rf2 e1Q 37.Rxd2 Qxd2 38.Rxg7 Kxg7 39.f6+! Rxf6 40.Nf5+ Kf8 41.Qxh7 Qg5 42.Qe7+ Kg8 43.Qd8+ Kh7 44.Qe7+ Kg6 45.g4! Rxf5 46.Qe6+ Kg7 47.gxf5 with a drawn queen ending. ]

33...Qxc3 The Promised Land is nearby for Black's e-pawn. The threat is 34...e2, to which, surprisingly, there is no remedy. 34.Rxg6

[ If 34.Qf3 then Qd2+ 35.Kh3 e2 and the e-pawn pushes through. ]

[TonyK]

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.d4 cxd4 4.Nxd4 This is the pertinent reply to Black's third move, before he has time to play ...Bg7 and control d4. 4...Nf6 5.Nc3 e5 6.Ndb5 Doubling the black pawns assures White a positional advantage, but Black will always have active pieces in compensation. 6...d6 7.Nd5 Nxd5 8.exd5 Ne7 9.c4 Nf5 Actually, ECO considers this position part of A41, that arises after 1 d4 d6, but I personally feel that this is an English Opening. 10.Bd3 g6!? 11.0-0 a6 12.Nc3! This move is positionally strong, White certainly cannot afford to do nothing and wait for Black to play ...c5, . ..Nc6-d4.

[ 12.Bg5 to control e4, when it will need some fancy footwork from White to avoid the perpetual. This is very risky, Be7 13.Bxe7 Qxe7 favours White, but at least the second rank is protected. White could certainly consider the endgame here, 14.Nc3 0-0 15.Qd2 Bd7 16.Rfe1 Rac8 17.Rac1 is obviously very good for him. Nd4? transposes into the previous note. 18.Ne2! Nxe2+ 19.Bxe2 Bf5 20.Qe3 wins the c-pawn for zero compensation. Another concession, b6 is better, as 21.Qxb6?! Rb8 22.Qxa6?! drops an exchange to Rxb2 An improvement on the previously played 23.a4?! allowing Rfb8! 24.c5 dxc5 when Black had managed to incarcerate both his bishops, Arsovic, Z-Certic,B/Belgrade 1994. 25.d6?? Qf6 A drastic reply that leaves the c-pawns as weaknesses for the rest of the game. 26.a5?! is difficult to believe, c4 27.Qxc4 Qxd6 28.a6 R8b4 29.Qc3 , David,P-Pribyl,J/Prague 1990, and now R4b3 looks simplest, intending to exchange the dark-squared bishops, as the weak c-pawns will drop off eventually. 30.Qc4 has the best reputation, Rb4 31.Qc3 R4b3 ]

12...Bg7!? 13.Rb1 0-0!? 14.b4 b6 15.Bd2 Ne7?!
